READY FOR DEFENCE – Skullcaped Israeli parachutists before the jump, during army exercises at Sinai border.

• Commentary •

By M.J. Nurenberger

SINAI

In his statement following the withdrawal of the United Nations Forces from the Gaza Strip and the Island of Sharm El Sheikh, the Prime Minister of Canada made an important point. Mr. Pearson, who, in 1956, had been involved in the appeal to the Israelis to evacuate Gaza, the Sinai Peninsula and the islands at the entrance to the Gulf of Aqaba, reminded Egypt: by having accepted the UN presence, it simultaneously acknowledged limited sovereignty over these areas. In fact, in those days of the Sinai war this concession had been made to Israel in order to persuade her to relinquish the occupation of conquered territory.

* * * * *

Various opinions followed the Sinai Campaign. Mr. Pearson believed Nasser could be directed and regarded as any responsible statesman interested in his country, that he should be given the opportunity. Others, among them the then Opposition Leader Diefenbaker, disagreed; they felt Nasser would misbehave once the threat of war and occupation were removed.

Also to be considered was the practical guarantee by the United States of America to Ben Gurion, then Israel's Prime Minister, that Israel — following its brilliant military victory in Sinai, Gaza and the Red Sea area — would evacuate these points under the "assumption" that the UN remained there and guaranteed the Jewish state access to the Red Sea route to the East; the UN police force would serve as a buffer against terrorists harassing the Israelis.

* * * * *

The term, assumption, is not mine; it is Eisenhower who used it for the whole world to hear when he appealed to Ben Gurion to pull back his armies. It was broadcast over radio and TV and is a matter of historic record.

In fact, Emmett John Hughes, at the time Eisenhower's closest adviser, says in his memoirs that the then American president never believed Ben Gurion would accede to this demand. For what guarantee is an "assumption" when one knows Nasser? What do Nasser's promises mean?

At that time too many others did not think Ben Gurion would be caught in this trap. Yet, in retrospect, one must take note of the pressure exerted upon him.

A factor in this pressure was the "advice" of some North American Jewish leaders, "good Zionists", who were angry with Ben Gurion because he did not inform them beforehand of his plans.

Naturally, in 1957, the militant national opposition in Israel's parliament was opposed to Ben Gurion's surrender to threats despite assurances by Dulles and Pearson, and notwithstanding Eisenhower's "assumptions".

Consequently this writer then commented that the evacuation would be, according to the old Hebrew term, "behiya ledorot" — a decision over which generations would shed tears.

* * * * *

Today, almost eleven years after the Sinai Campaign, some may tend to forget the background that led to Israel's participation in the Sinai Drive.

Ben Gurion hesitated up to the very last moment for, from the beginning, he had suspected that France and Great Britain might use Israel's armed forces only in order to reach their objectives in the Suez Canal.

(Despite all statements to the contrary, Israel was born in an act of anti-imperialist revolt; it does not condone any imperialist objectives whether directed against Negroes, Burmese, Chinese or Arabs.

It is Nasser, on the other hand, who has introduced into the Middle East a new imperialism after the old imperialists withdrew from the area. He has conducted himself consistently in typical Hitler-manner, as the self-appointed leader of all Arabs from the Atlantic to the Indian Ocean, notwithstanding that Egypt, an Arabic speaking country, is the only racially non-Arab community.

In more than one detail does Nasser remind us of Hitler, the non-German who led the Germans in a nationalist adventure, to the greatest disaster in their history. And it is not an accident that the Egyptian leader entertains among his coterie so many prominent Nazi propagandists.)

In 1956 Israel resorted to military action, following continuous organized incursions on its sovereign territory by Egyptian trained Fedayeen who practised murder of women and children from across the Gaza Strip.

SHAZAR CONQUERS HEART OF CANADA

by The Canadian Jewish News Reporter

President Zalman Shazar, addressing Jewish community leaders this week in Montreal and Ottawa, called upon the Jewish people to remain the vanguard of the State of Israel. The President of Israel, who arrived in Canada last Friday for a ten-day official visit, opened the Israeli Pavilion at Expo on Tuesday. He refused to make any political, public statements save for stressing the gravity of the situation in Israel. Mr. Shazar will conclude his visit in Toronto where he arrives for the weekend.

Last Saturday, the Canadian Jewish Congress' religious welfare committee, in cooperation with Mizrachi-Hapoel Hamizrachi, arranged for a Shabat minyan. Similar private services have been organized in Toronto by Mizrachi-Hapoel Hamizrachi, the religious Zionist organization.

Sunday night, May 28th, the Israeli president will address Toronto's Jewish community under the auspices of the United Jewish Appeal and the Federated Zionist Organization of Canada at the Royal York Hotel. It is expected that this meeting will become a mammoth demonstration for the beleaguered Jewish state, though Mr. Shazar's statement will be strictly non-political.

Children of Toronto's Jewish schools will tender the president a special welcome on Sunday morning, May 29th, at the North York Centennial Arena, arranged by the Bureau of Jewish Education.

The third Israeli president arrived in Canada last Friday by special plane direct from Jerusalem. He began his official visit on Sunday with a gigantic ceremony attended by thousands on Parliament Hill where he was welcomed by Gov.-Gen. Roland Mitchener and Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson, both known friends of the State of Israel. Both the Israeli president and Mrs. Shazar, who accompanies him on this tour, were cheered. Mr. Shazar reviewed a special Guard of Honor and expressed his gratitude to Canada, following the greeting by the Governor-General and the Prime Minister.

In Montreal, the President received a delegation of the Canadian Jewish Congress headed by Samuel Bronfman, president, and Saul Hayes, Q.C., executive vice president. He also met a delegation of the Labor Zionist Movement. Mrs. Shazar received representatives of the Pioneer Women.

On Sunday night, the Governor-General proffered a state dinner for President and Mrs. Shazar at Government House. Mr. Shazar is said to be deeply moved by the cordiality shown him by the Governor-General and Mrs. Mitchner.

A special luncheon was tendered by Prime Minister Pearson.

On Mr. Shazar's busy schedule were official receptions by the provincial premiers of Quebec and Ontario, the Hon. Daniel Johnson and John Robarts respectively, as well as by the mayors of Montreal, Ottawa and Toronto.

A highlight of Mr. Shazar's visit in Toronto is an official luncheon today by the Lieutenant-Governor of the Province of Ontario, the Hon. Earl Rowe, and a visit to the state legislature where he will be greeted by Premier John Robarts.

THE MOOD IN ISRAEL

by Aaron Sarfati, Jerusalem CJN Correspondent

Should the calamity occur and Nasser attack Israeli shipping, military experts here contend his defeat will be quick and decisive despite his boasting in Cairo.

A military expert told this newspaper he doubts Egypt will be able to muster any sizeable forces that are a match for Israel. The cream of Nasser's army still is involved in the Yemen. Should the Israeli government even have to fight on two fronts, in the north and in the south, Israel will have no problem with the Egyptian army deployed in Sinai.

Israelis still believe though they are mobilized and ready for the worst – that Nasser's actions are more political talk than otherwise.

One explanation for the Egyptian dictator's course is the fear which gripped Damascus, capital of Syria, last week, following Premier Levi Eshkol's warning.

However, Eshkol's appeal to the Arabs on Monday to resume peaceful coexistence, an appeal made at the behest of Western powers, may give Nasser a last-minute excuse for a grand exit.

The Israelis continue "business as usual" despite mobilization.

An interesting sidelight is the announcement by Lebanon, Israel's neighbor to the north, which usually is very much informed about Arab moves, that it opened a new tourist office in Paris and invites visitors to spend the summer there.

This report from Lebanon confirms the view of optimists that, at the last moment, actual warfare will be prevented.

SAY DEMOCRACY IS ENDANGERED

West Berlin, (JCNS) – Sharp action against "a political party", which was allowed to agitate with Nazi slogans was urged by Mr. Heinz Galinski, the chairman of the West Berlin Jewish community last week.

He made this reference to the N.D.P. at a ceremony at the West Berlin Jewish community centre to mark the anniversary of the Warsaw Ghetto Uprising.

Mr. Galinski also criticised the widespread "lack of interest and self-complacency", which was endangering democratic life in the country.

Herr Dietrich Spangenberg, the West Berlin senator for federal affairs, appealed at the ceremony to all Berliners who emigrated during the Nazi regime to return and "give their home town a chance".

"Our doors are wide open and will stay open", he added.

Jordan Breaks With Syria

SPECIAL CANADIAN JEWISH NEWS REPORT
COMPILED FROM OUR NEWS SERVICES
BY THE CJN DIPLOMATIC EDITOR

Canada's declaration to the world at large — that Israel has the right to live in peace — places this country in the forefront of the powers, big and small, which make a supreme effort to prevent an immediate war in the Middle East. The statement this week in Ottawa by the Rt. Hon. Lester B. Pearson, the Prime Minister, following the official reception for President Zalman Shazar of Israel, very clearly outlined Canada's policy. Mr. Pearson said in effect that the State of Israel has demonstrated its will to live and has the unquestioned right, as have the Arab states, to develop and exist in peace.

While international opinion is alarmed by Egyptian dictator Abdul Gamal Nasser's defiant speech to his air force on Monday — that he would not allow Israeli ships to cross the Strait of Tiran (Israel's only outlet to the high seas from the southern Port of Eilat) — hope still prevailed in Canada's capital that such a move never would be effectuated. (One Israeli ship passed the straits on Tuesday without interference.

In fact, both Prime Minister Pearson and the Hon. Paul Martin, Secretary of State for External Affairs, quietly have taken the lead in behind-the-scene, diplomatic action. Following his dramatic visit in New York last Saturday — when he publicly declared at the United Nations that Canada would labor incessantly for the restoration of peace in the Near East — Mr. Martin has kept the light burning on Parliament Hill.

In this extraordinary crisis which may plunge the world into a new chaos, the Canadian government — which has maintained consistently its non-partisanship between the Jewish state and the Arab nations, supporting the right of each to live — initiated the following diplomatic steps:

• From Moscow it is reported that the Canadian ambassador has told the Russian government how much this country would appreciate its good Soviet offices in pointing out to Nasser that any adventure may be dangerous to his regime. (Despite statements to the contrary, Russia still is not very clear about its intentions. Though Washington and Ottawa are cautiously optimistic, Moscow would not tolerate real war in the Middle East. Both capitals are unimpressed by headlines.)

• Congressional leaders in Washington are taking an unusually pessimistic view on the Mid-East situation. Following Johnson's statement that the U.S. would honor its pledge to Israel, American leaders are determined to confront Russia if necessary. The American view is that Nasser threatens the peace of the World.

• Jordan took the unusual step of breaking Arab unity by severing diplomatic relations with Syria.

• London has been supported in similar efforts by the Canadian government. Prior to his departure for Moscow on Tuesday, Foreign Minister George Brown was informed by Canada on its position.

• In Cairo and at the United Nations, Arab statesmen were reminded that it was Canada's leadership in 1956 that helped the evacuation of Egyptian territory after the Sinai victory. It is in accordance with this policy that Canada now hopes for Egyptian understanding of the present dangers.

• In Jerusalem, the government distinctly repeated its position made clear following the Sinai withdrawal in March, 1957: any interference with Israeli shipping in the Gulf of Tiran would be considered by Jerusalem a causus belli. This statement was reiterated as late as last Tuesday evening by a spokesman for Israel's foreign ministry.

• In Ottawa, the President of Israel, Zalman Shazar, now touring the country, expressed his appreciation for the position of the Canadian government, which is supported by the Rt. Hon John G. Diefenbaker, Leader of the Opposition.

The support of Israel has been a bipartisan policy of Canada since Israel's establishment.

COMMUNICATION WITH THE DEPARTED IN JEWISH LAW

by Dr. A.E. Silverstone

It is a basic belief of Judaism that the soul is immortal, and that at some future date there will be a resurrection of the dead. It is one of the Thirteen Principles laid down by Maimonides in the twelfth century.

Morris Joseph writes: "The doctrine of the Immortality of the Soul is an integral part of the Jewish creed. It is more: it is a necessary ingredient of every consistent religious creed. It follows as the logical sequel to the very belief in God."

Man feels that he has not had a reasonable chance in this life to fulfil his destiny. "He knows he shall see God after death. The ethical necessities of an unfinished cause demand a life to come," says George Adam Smith. But this is not easily susceptible of proof.

Millions of people the world over, however, assert that it is possible to communicate with the souls of the dead. If this is true, we have here the best proof of the soul's immortality; for if it is possible to communicate with the souls of people who have died, then obviously the souls are alive somewhere. Spiritualism - communication with departed spirits - would then become a powerful ally of Judaism.

It is noteworthy that great thinkers of the calibre of Alfred Russel Wallace, William Crookes, Oliver Lodge, Conan Doyle, Camille Flammarion and many others, have, by intensive research into psychic phenomena, satisfied themselves as to the validity of the claims of spiritualism. There is a vast literature on the subject; and it is not intended here to argue the case for or against spiritualism.

Assuming it is possible to communicate with the spirits of the dead, is it desirable? Is it right to engage in such research, or can the exploration of the unknown lead to undesirable results? Many scholars, both Jewish and Christian, regard psychic research with disfavor, and are completely opposed to it.

Dr. Leslie Weatherhead, for example, though admitting there is a strong case for accepting spiritualism, is nevertheless opposed to any exploration of this field. He writes: "The physical brain is made for a physical body in a material world. If all the glories of that other world were to burst in upon us now, that brain would be so restless that it would lead men to suicide as a way of escape from this life; or, what is more likely, it would give way altogether, and men would be robbed of their sanity. The human brain in its present state of development would be unable to stand the strain of such a revelation."

Is there really any substance in this argument? Many hundreds of thousands of people, possibly millions, have taken an interest in psychical research, and have attended seances; and they have neither committed suicide nor become insane. However nice the next world is, no one is in a hurry to get there.

Those who attend seances assert that they gain great spiritual comfort from the fact that they are able to communicate with their loved ones.

In any case, it is completely wrong to limit the scope of man's research into anything. For thousands of years man has been searching, ever reaching upwards, trying to understand his own world, and the planets, constellations, always discovering new vistas of human knowledge. God has placed within him the instinct to seek knowledge, and has given him the apparatus, the brain and mind, with which to reach out for new discoveries.

There is, therefore, nothing undesirable in engaging in psychic research.

It would, in fact, appear to be eminently desirable, as is research in any subject; for if, by intense and continuous research, it is established beyond doubt that communication with departed souls is possible, what a great boon this would be to those who mourn the passing of close relatives! They would realise that their loved ones are in existence somewhere; that there is no death for the soul; that only the body, the outer garment which clothed the soul, was placed in the grave, but not the soul: the soul lives on.

There are thousands of practising mediums in Britain; and though, on occasion, some mediums have been found to be fraudulent, nevertheless, it appears that the vast majority are honest and sincere. Maurice Barbanell, editor of "Psychic News", has unmasked many fake mediums; but this has not shaken his belief in spiritualism.

Naturally, if a person finds that a visit to a medium is too emotionally disturbing, he should not go again. But people do not attend séances only for the purpose of obtaining solace in their sorrow; many go simply because they wish to ascertain the truth; whether it is, in fact, possible to communicate with the spirit world, and to ask questions about the nature of the afterlife.

The spirits describe how life in the other world is a continuation of this; that a spirit has to work out his own salvation; and that there are several planes to which spirits of different degrees of preparation go. But they are not prophets: they do not, on translation to the next world, suddenly become omniscient: it would be no use, for example, asking a spirit to give the name of the winner of the Derby. He would not know any more than the horse would know.

However, even if it is desirable to consult mediums, if the consultation will bring comfort or information, there is still a very important problem to face.

Is it permissible according to Jewish Law?

The Bible appears to prohibit it. "Turn ye not unto the ghosts, nor unto familiar spirits". (Lev. 19, 31; see also Lev. 20. 6:27).

In fact, this may be inferred from the Bible itself, for the condemnation of Molech worship (which is obviously idolatry) in Leviticus, chapter 20, verses 1 to 5, is followed in verse 6 by the condemnation of the Ob (ghost) and Yiddeoni (familiar spirits) cults; and the same verb, zana (to go astray), which is commonly used for idolatry, is used of Molech and also of Ob and Yiddeoni.

In Deuteronomy, chapter 18, verses 10-11, Molech worship and Ob, Yiddeoni and Doresh el Hametim are prohibited in consecutive verses: "There shall not be found among you any one that maketh his son or his daughter to pass through the fire (Molech worship) . . . or one that consulteth a ghost or familiar spirit, or inquirer of the dead (doresch el hametim)".

The Bible, in effect, says: "Do not worship or pray to Molech, Ob and Yiddeoni; do not worship or pray to the dead; do not treat them as deities". In fact, the expression Doresh el Hametim (instead of min, from) implies prayer.

That this is so is clear from many passages where the verb darash obviously implies prayer. The conclusion one arrives at is that Doresh el Hametim was forbidden because it was an idolatrous cult; the people actually prayed to the spirits of the dead, treated them as deities, and asked for their help.

The rabbis mentioned in the Talmud as having communicated with the spirits of the dead did no wrong, for they did not pray to them or treat them as deities: they merely conversed with them.

It would appear, therefore, that Judaism is not opposed to psychic research, for psychic research does not imply worship of the dead, but merely communication with them.

Two Weeks To Go

UJA Auto Division Closes Drive

With but two weeks more of the 1967 United Jewish Appeal campaign, the Automotive Division is approaching rapidly the completion of its goal.

Successful in the campaign with a twelve percent increase over its 1966 figure, the Division will terminate its activity at a victory celebration.

All Automotive Division workers and their wives will attend a cocktail party, Monday, May 29th, 8:30 p.m., at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Himel, when the names of the chairmen for the 1968 campaign will be announced.

The Division has worked as a cohesive unit, enabling it to obtain the necessary increase for maintaining its leadership role in the campaign, as was noted by co-chairmen Howard Himel, Nat Hurwich and Joe Lunenfeld.

26,000 Jews In Germany

Duesseldorf (JCNS) - Latest returns show that there are about 70 Jewish communities, with 26,100 registered members, in West Germany. They worship in 45 synagogues and 48 prayer-rooms and there are 15 rabbis and 38 cantors.

A total of 1,024 children, aged between six and 13 years, and 656 young people receive religious instruction from 64 teachers. About 1,648 young people are members of 51 youth groups run by the communities in different parts of the country.

SYNAGOGUE LEADERS OF UJA – Seen are leaders of Toronto's Beth Sholom Synagogue–United Jewish Appeal committee at a recently held meeting chaired by James Betesh (left), followed by Irving Sacks, Jack Kreaden, Frank Cadesky, Henry Donsky, Lou Gula.

More than 60% of the cards already have been covered and the synagogue is about 10% ahead of last year's pledges, according to Mr. Betesh. Pledge cards were reassigned among those present.

The committee also ran a Telethon a week ago Thursday at the offices of the United Jewish Appeal; fifteen men participated. Results were highly satisfactory.

Contributors of Beth Sholom to the UJA campaign may contact Mr. Betesh or the synagogue for complimentary tickets to the cantorial concert with world renowned Cantor David Kussevitsky, which will be held on Thursday, June 8th, 8:30 p.m., at the Shaarei Shamayim.

INVITED TO TALKS.–Messrs. Joel Morgenstern and Louis J. Zuker, Q.C., prominent members of the Board of Governors, State of Israel Bonds of Toronto, who now are in Israel, have been invited to talks with Israel's Finance Minister Pinhas Sapir, to discuss current economic developments and the role of Israel Bonds in assisting Israel during the present transition period.

Mr. Sapir paid tribute to Toronto's outstanding record of support for Israel Bonds and was assured by the Toronto leaders that concentrated efforts are being made at this time to assure Israel a flow of loan dollars in advance of the annual campaign.

Hill Tells CJN

Discrimination Will End

by The Canadian Jewish News Reporter

Dismissal of the prosecution against a Gravenhurst widow under the Ontario Human Rights Code sets no precedence whatsoever, according to special prosecutor Charles Dubin.

Dubin said that when the case was heard last February, Magistrate Douglas Bice of Bracebridge ruled most of the evidence inadmissable.

Consequently prosecutor Bruce Haines put the defendant, Mrs. W. A. Fletcher, on the stand and compelled her to testify against herself.

The Magistrate listened to the evidence without ruling on its admissability.

Mrs. Fletcher feared that she might lose tenants in other cottages if she rented to the Organ and Bernstein families.

She stated she has received objection from tenants on another occasion when she had rented to a Jewish couple.

Subsequently the Human Rights Commission decided it did not want to rely on the evidence of the defendant. When the Magistrate was so advised, he dismissed the case without making any rulings on the evidence.

Dubin said that this would enable him to apply for a new trial in a higher court.

Mrs. Fletcher was charged with denying accommodation and with discrimination against Mr. and Mrs. Leon Bernstein of Downsview and Donald Organ of Willowdale.

"I didn't have any objection to the Organ and Bernstein families; they seemed like nice young couples..."

A deposit was left by both Families on two cottages. Their deposits, however were returned by mail with a note saying that the cottages already had been rented and a mistake had been made.

Dr. Daniel G. Hill, director of the Ontario Human Rights Commission, stated that a decision would be made this week on further court action.

"Regardless of what happens in this particular case," Dr. Hill said, "we have no doubt that this type of discrimination is illegal under the Code."

The Shazar Visit

CANADA ISRAEL FRIENDSHIP

Israel may well be proud of the men elected as its heads of state. Its first president, the late Chaim Weizmann, was praised by the opposition leader as a former opponent who had forgotten all partisanship when he ascended this high representative office. The second president, Yitzhaq Ben Zvi, is remembered as one who led the simple life of a pioneer, who refused to abandon his humble abode despite his august position.

Israel's third president, Zalman Shazar, now the guest of Canada, combines the finest characteristics of both predecessors. He is a statesman and diplomat of Weizmannesque stature as well as a traditional, observant Jew as was Yitzhaq Ben Zvi.

According to tradition, when the King of Israel travels, it behooves him to carry along the Scroll of Torah.

In this sense, Zalman Shazar fulfills completely the requisites prescribed by the Halakha: he travels with the Sefer Torah. He impresses the mighty of the earth by his devotion to the spirit which he places above matter. Everyone recalls when Shazar, during his recent visit to New York, went to see the Lubavitcher Rebbe instead of requesting the Rebbe to come to him. Thus he demonstrated that above the Jerusalem of this earth is the Jerusalem of Heaven, the eternal symbol of the Jew's link with the spiritual.

This dedication to the perennial values of Judaism makes us a people apart, the Jewish state a nation apart, without fear of those who in their blindness fail to see that the iniquity of Egypt never can vanquish the sanctity of the Nation of Priests. For they, in the ancient words, ride on horses while we walk in the name of the God, the Lord who is the Guardian of Zion and His city.

Shazar's visit to Canada symbolizes, at the same time, the profound understanding and friendship between the two nations, both permeated with the spirit of the Bible. And the people of Canada know that only by burning the Bible can one do away with the Lord's promise that the Land of Israel belongs to the Children of Israel.

Thus, despite international tension, the visit of the Israeli president occurs in an atmosphere of this unbending faith in God's word which unites the two nations.

SCIENCE IN ISRAEL

Three Israeli scientists are studying the ways in which people adapt themselves to living in hot and arid zones as determined by physiological factors. Dr. Shlomo Samueloff, of the Department of Physiology in the Hebrew University-Hadassah Medical School, and Drs. A. Antonovsky and Rachel Katz, both of the Israel Institute of Applied Social Research, are conducting this study, which is of special interest to Israel in view of the hopes to make the Negev habitable.

The three Israeli scientists started their work last summer by selecting 40 workers employed in a large industrial enterprise in the Negev for tests to determine the degree of their physiological adaptation to their environment. Also investigated was their water balance and their heart activity throughout a complete day of work. Every volunteer carried a transistor which relayed his heartbeats through a recording device.

Recently, the scientists resumed their examinations in order to compare the winter results with those of the summer. This study will make it possible to isolate the influence of climate from the other factors which determine adaptation to desert conditions.

ADOLESCENCE • New Facts

by Leonard Pulver

Alcohol and tobacco are far more dangerous than marijuana or LSD, according to Dr. Nathan B. Epstein, distinguished Canadian psychiatrist, who spoke at a luncheon meeting of the Jewish Family and Child Service of Metropolitan Toronto at Beth Tzedec last Wednesday. In his address, Dr. Epstein said that while alcohol and tobacco are the most dangerous of all drugs, there are no "pushers" trying to introduce young people to them.

"LSD is a problem, but how serious or intense a problem, we don't know. Is it dangerous? It seems to be potentially very dangerous, but of even this we are not yet sure.

"Recent research has revealed genetic changes caused by LSD - even from only one use. If this is true (and we must do much more research both with animals and humans to tell), it could be very dangerous. But we don't know yet.

"As for marijuana, it may not hurt anybody. It is not addictive and has few negative effects.

"Some people say that the real danger from marijuana is, they go from that to heroin. This does not seem valid. It's the way we treat it that does this.

"Healthy youngsters don't get hooked on narcotics, even though they may try it once or twice. It's the disturbed child who becomes seriously involved. Is it worse for him to be an 'acidhead' or 'pothead', or worse to be confined in a mental hospital?"

Dr. Epstein also told the Luncheon guests that disturbances in children often reflect problems of the parents.

"The adolescent child frequently reawakens in (his) parents problems that they thought were finished years before.

"Kids key right in on situations but when they find that the parents are not leveling.. it first causes confusion and then conflict. Then the parent goes to the psychiatrist or therapist and says, 'Fix my kid!"

Dr. Epstein pointed out that this is why family group therapy is so important in the treatment of adolescent disturbances.

One of the main problems of adolescence is the "dependency independency conflict". He stressed that when a child feels he wants to leave home it is healthy for him to move out.

Frequently opposition to this is caused by the parents' fear of the youngsters failing. "People learn by trial and error," he said. "If there is no risk there is no accomplishment."

A parent asked from the floor, "What do you do with a boy who just won't move out?"

Dr. Eptsein replied, "Throw him out."

Dr. Epstein, 43, father of three teenagers, just has resigned as associated professor at McGill University to head the Psychiatry Department at the new McMaster University Medical School.

More than 250 people attended the meeting, the first of a series in the membership drive launched by the Jewish Family and Child Service.

Mrs. Ray D. Wolfe, membership committee chairman, pointed out that the object of the agency is "more than just picking up the pieces after a marriage has broken up. It is to help sustain the family."

KEEP SMILING

OOPS....A MISTAKE!

A little old Jewish painter hired to paint a house did the bedroom first. That night, Mendel Hartman inspected the paint job. Thinking the wall was dry, he put his hand on it. He left an imprint which distressed him very much. His wife assured him that the painter could touch it up.

Next morning, Mrs. Hartman said to the painter who was preparing to paint the kitchen:

"Before you start on the kitchen, come into the bedroom. I want to show you where my husband put his hand."

"Please, missus," pleaded the painter, "Already I'm an old man. If you wanna do me a favor, give me better a glass of tea with lemon."

SO WHO CARES?

Abie was urged by his family and friends in America to join them; he could make a fortune. Finally he decided to go. But with little money and a lot of pride, he booked passage on a little, rickety old streamer.

The trip took longer, but Abie had plenty of time.

After five days on sea, a storm brewed. The ship began to rock and pitch. Everybody on the boat was sick. Soon word began to spread that the ship was sinking People ran everywhere. They cried and prayed.

One of the passengers, noting how calm Abie was, cried out:

"How can you be so composed and unconcerned when the ship is sinking?"

"So why should I worry?" answered Abie. "Do I own the ship?"

CONVENIENCE

Walking down the street, a woman noticed her psychiatrist running along with a couch on his back.

She rushed up to him and asked, "Dr. Pupick, what are you doing?"

"Making house calls!"

Fiftieth Anniversary of Jewish Legion

BIRTH OF ISRAEL'S MODERN ARMY

by Josef Fraenkel

From time to time there were men whose aim it was to create a Jewish army in order to reconquer Eretz Israel. There was David Alroy (1160) and David Reubeni (1524); in 1799, Napoleon called on the Jews to join his army and return to their ancient land; Theodor Herzl spoke of the necessity of a Jewish army. However, the idea of forming a Jewish Legion to fight for the liberation of Eretz Israel under the British was carried out by Vladimir Jabotinsky.

In World War I Jewish soldiers fought on all fronts, of the Allies as well as of the Central European Powers. More than 150,000 Jews died as German, Turkish, English or Russian soldiers.

The World Zionist Organisation, stressing its neutrality, opened an office in Copenhagen, and members of the Zionist Executive worked in Germany as well as in England, trying to obtain pro-Zionist declaration. But there were Zionists who were not concerned about neutrality, among them Jabotinsky and Weizmann. They were convinced that England would win the war and that the collapse of the Turkish Empire would make the creation of a Jewish Palestine possible.

JABOTINSKY MEETS TRUMPELDOR

Palestine was then ruled by Djemal Pasha, Governor and Commandant of the Fourth Army Corps, and he expelled thousands of Jews to Alexandria. It was there that Jabotinsky met Joseph Trumpeldor, at the end of 1914. Trumpeldor was enthusiastic about the idea of forming a Jewish Legion from among these refugees, to fight for the liberation of Palestine. The idea, however, was not acceptable to General Maxwell, commander of the British troops in Egypt, chiefly for the fact that Palestine had not yet become a theatre of war. He suggested, however, the formation of the "Zion Mule Corps", which was to go into action in Gallipoli. While Jabotinsky refused to be associated with Gallipoli, Trumpeldor, and with him 650 volunteers, accepted. Col. Henry Patterson took over the command of "Zion Mule Corps", whose flag was the "Magen David." It rendered valuable services, suffered heavy casualties, and was disbanded in May 1916.

Meantime, Jabotinsky was persistent and indefatigable. The decision rested with London. Weizmann, Joseph Cowen, President of the English Zionist Federation, Dr. M. D. Eder, Israel Zangwill and Herbert Samuel were sympathetic, but by far the majority of the British and Russian Jews opposed the plan. There were meetings in Whitechapel which anti-Zionists, Bundists, anarchists tried to disrupt, and quite often Jabotinsky was roughly manhandled.

THE LETTER TO LLOYD GEORGE

On January 24, 1917, Jabotinsky and Trumpeldor wrote to the Prime Minister, David Loyd George, setting out in detail their proposal to raise a Jewish regiment for service in Palestine, to be composed of Russian and English Jews. Already they had 650 volunteers, many of them members of the former "Zion Mule Corps." Further recruitment, it was suggested, had to have official support and the British Government should declare that the "future of Palestine would be favourable to Zionist aspirations." A Jewish regiment, so the memorandum explained, would also have political significance, especially in America. The Government should therefore "give a certain official recognition to the old Zionist idea of the Jewish people and call on the Jewish youth to fight on the side of the Allies for liberation of Palestine". Russian Jews living in France would come forward, as well as Jews living in neutral countries and, as time went on, recruitment in America and Russia could also be contemplated. "Its results, in recruits as well as in pro-Entente feeling, would be very considerable."

The letter to Lloyd George, a Welshman and lover of the Bible, concluded as follows: "We ask for the Jew the privilege the Welshman has to fight for his country; to fight like the Welshman does, in regiments of his own, not scattered and nameless."

The "Times" and the "Manchester Guardian" published leading articles favourable to the plan. It also received the support of Colonel H. Patterson and Captain L. Armery. Jewish personalities of standing and influence, however, exerted strong pressure upon the government to withhold its consent.

Nine weeks before the Balfour Declaration, on August 23, 1917, the "London Gazette" announced the formation of two battalions of Jewish volunteers (Royal Fusiliers), under the command of Col. H. Patterson. The Judaens, as they came to be known, took the Menorah as their symbol. When on February 4, 1918, a Jewish contingent in full battle dress marched through the City of London, their blue-white flag with the "Magen David" bearing the Hebrew insignia: "If I forget thee, Jerusalem, may my right hand forget her cunning," the delight of the Jews, even of former opponents, was immense. A band of the Coldstream Guards played "Hatikvah", and Whitechapel became a scene of unbounded enthusiasm. Four weeks later, when the Jewish Legion marched through the streets of Cairo, they were again greeted enthusiastically. Sir Reginald Wingate, the British High Commissioner in Egypt, in his welcome, expressed the view that "the Jewish nation would be able to create a successful national home in Palestine." He was pleased with Jewish regiments "making history."

SOLDIERS FROM CANADA

In Palestine itself requests for more recruits became unnecessary: volunteers joined from the settlements and from the towns. Jewish soldiers came from America, among them Yitzhak Ben-Zvi and David Ben-Gurion, as well as from Canada and the Argentine. The number of regiments rose to three: Nos. 38, 39 and 40 of the Royal Fusiliers under the command of Patterson, Eliezer Margolin and F.D. Samuel respectively.

The Jewish Legion played an important part in the occupation of South Palestine, conquered the Jordan fortress of Umm Es Shert, and forced a crossing over the Jordan. It assumed responsibility for law and order in Palestine after the war, and was demobilised in October 1920.

After nearly two thousand years, the Jewish Legion was the first Jewish contingent to fight for a Jewish Palestine. It brought high esteem to Jews in the Allied countries and fanned the flame of Zionism to new deeds.

Protest BOAC surrender

Dear Editor,

I am deeply distressed to learn that the British Overseas Airways Corporation has bowed to Arab boycott pressure by cancelling two of its flights to the Far East (India and Hong Kong) via Lod Airport, Israel.

Announcing the cancellation, a BOAC spokesman in London said the action was taken because Pakistan had prohibited overflight rights of aircraft flying via Israel.

This action by BOAC repudiates the Chicago Convention (of which Pakistan is a signatory) which declares: "The skies are free paggage for civil airlines! Too, coming as it does in 1967 which has been designated by the United Nations as International Tourist Year, BOAC's action is a challenge to every country that pledged its co-operation in this great world effort to stimulate international understanding through the medium of tourism.

BOAC's compliant acceptance represents a disturbing surrender to Arab boycott pressures. It inhibits tourism and disrupts Israel's communications with the Far East.

I hope that BOAC will be moved to renew its flights through Israel to the Far East in keeping with the spirit of International Tourist Year.

LIFE SENTENCE FOR NAZI KILLER

Duesseldorf (JCNS) - Hugo Rochel, 70, a former kapo (auxiliary policeman) at Flossenbuerg concentration camp in Germany during the Second World War, was sentenced to life imprisonment in Weiden last week for the murder of a 45-year-old Jewish prisoner.

The jury found that Rochel had forced the Jew into the prohibited zone by the fence surrounding a quarry where the prisoners worked and the man had been shot by the S.S. guards.

Rochel had been feared for his brutality and he had been reprimanded even by the S.S. for maltreating his fellow prisoners without reason, the jury said.

The jury acquitted Rochel of three other charges of murder because of insufficient evidence.

Sermon of the week

FREE TO SERVE GOD

The portion of this week is dominated by the Tochecha, the dire commination of the Children of Israel, and the warning of the tragic fate which will overtake them if they "walk not in My statutes". That gloomy passage however is preceded by its opposite, the promise of the boon and the blessings which will accrue to them if they do "walk in My statutes". The two passages therefore constitute the two extremes, of light and darkness, of blessing and curse, of promise and warning.

Yet there is one verse which is repeated at the conclusion of each section. "I am the Lord thy God who brought you out of the Land of Egypt". Thus far both verses are identical, but the continuation is not. The former verse continues, "that ye should not be bondsmen, and I have broken the bonds of your yoke"; while the latter continues, "that I might be their God".

One of the most moving homilies in the Talmud concerns the Jewish conception of freedom from human bondage and its ultimate purpose. It bases itself upon the interpretation of the simple verse of the Bible, "Unto me are the children of Israel servants". To this the famous Rabban Johanan B. Zakkai adds the equally simple observation, "Unto Me are thy servants, but not servants to servants".

In those simple and succinct words there is summed up the whole philosophy of freedom. The passion of the Jew for liberty is not that he may throw off every yoke of restraint, but that he should thereby be free to assume the "yoke of the Kingdom of Heaven" and the "yoke of the commandments". He yearns for freedom from man in order to be able to be the devoted servant of God.

Herein is just the difference between these two verses which speak of the Exodus from Egypt. We were brought out "that ye should not be bondsmen". But that emancipation from human bondage was but to establish the conditions for the "divine bondage" which is expressed in the second verse, "that I might be your God". For liberty must never be confused with libertinism.

Such consideration apply both to the individual and to the Jewish people as a whole. The only justification for the striving for political independence which brought about the emergence of the State of Israel was, and is, that in an independent Jewish State those conditions would be created which would bring about the evolution of a civilisation in accordance with the spiritual ideals of Judaism.

Finely does Maimonides express this view in the last chapter of his classic Mishneh Torah. Accepting the doctrine that the Messianic Age is none other than freedom from a foreign yoke, he continues:

"The Sages and Prophets did not long for the days of the Messiah that Israel might exercise dominion over the world, or rule over the heathens or be exalted by the nations, or that it might eat, drink, and be merry. Their aspiration was that Israel would thus be free to devote itself to the Torah with its wisdom, with none to oppress and disturb".

And by that criterion the State will ultimately be judged.

Travel and Adventure

WITH BLACK JEWS IN HEART OF UGANDA

by Arye Oded

On the outskirts of Mbale, in the Eastern Province of Uganda, there exists a small congregation of Africans known as the "Bayudaya", which in the local language means the Jews (B is the plural prefix; -Yudaya- a Jew). The Bayudaya number about 500 persons, the remnants of a larger community which came into being at the beginning of this century.

The author has made a study of the Bayudaya in reading for a doctorate in the Department of Religious Studies at Makerere University College, Uganda.

I first learned of the Bayudaya in 1961. I wrote to the leader of the community, Mr. Shimshon Mugembe Israeli, and we agreed to meet in Mbale. When I arrived, I found a group of Africans wrapped in white embroidered clothes. Diagonally across their shoulders they wore wide belts, made of cloth in different colours - red, yellow or blue. Their heads covered with white turbans and their faces shone anointed with oil. Some of them were adorned with beards and had dignified faces.

Shimshon Israeli, their leader, a tall man in his fifties, invited me to his home in Namanyoni village. About 3 miles north of Mbale we left our car and walked through narrow and twisting footways, between banana, cotton and coffee plantations. During our walk Shimshon Israeli spoke to me with enthusiasm of the history of the Bayudaya and its founder.

When we arrived a few hours later in Mr. Israeli's house, all the elders were summoned and a lively discussion ensued. I stayed with them until late at night trying to elicit all the information they could still remember about the early days of their community.

A fascinating and surprising story was revealed to me about the Bayudaya and how they came to profess Judaism. The following account is based upon these meetings and many others which I have held with the Bayudaya in the course of the last five years.

The founder of the Bayudaya is Semei Kakungulu, a famous man in the history of Uganda and its most capable and gifted general. Kakungulu, the son of a distinguished Muganda family, became known when he took part in the religious wars in Uganda in the late 1880's. A Protestant, he played a major role in defeating the Moslems and Catholics.

When the British arrived in Uganda he helped them to subdue the tribes in the east and the north of Uganda up to the Sudan borders. As a reward, he was given the chieftainship of a large area in the eastern part of the country. There he built the town of Mbale, today the third town in size and population in Uganda. Kakungulu had hoped that the British would agree to make him king of the eastern part of Uganda in recognition of his services. The British, however refused to establish another kingdom in Uganda. Kakungulu realised that he had failed in his political ambitions, and had wasted his time and effort.

In his bitterness and disappointment he cast off his political and military interests and became immersed in religious affairs. Thus he came into contact with a new religious sect, the Bamalaki, who appeared in Uganda in 1913 and opposed the Government on religious grounds. The Bamalaki are named after their leader Malaki Musajakawa. Malaki and his followers recognised only the authority of the Bible and on many religious questions differed from other Protestants. They refused to work on Sabbath and despised pork.

But the most important aspect of the new faith, which at the beginning of the century swiftly spread through the whole of Uganda (by 1921 their number exceeded 100,000), was an extreme objection to the use of medicine and immunisation both for human beings and animals. If God could save human beings from the fire of hell, it was argued, there was no need for doctors' devices in times of sickness.

In proof of this belief they quoted many passages from the Bible, among them, Jeremiah (46,11): "In vain shalt thou use many medicines; for thou shalt not be cured". Their refusal to be immunised when there was an epidemic put them in the bad books of the British Administration. Malaki was banned and died in prison.

Kakungulu joined hands with the Bamalaki and spread their teachings in the Eastern Province from his base in Mbale. He devoted much of his time to the reading of the Old Testament, the book he admired, and the more he read it the further he drifted apart from the rest of the Bamalaki.

According to Mr. Israeli, Kakungulu was particularly impressed by the verse in Zechariah (8,23), "In those days it shall come to pass, that ten men out of all the languages of the nations shall take hold of the skirt of one Jew, saying: We will go with you for we have heard that God is with you". He advocated that the circumcision rite he introduced; the majority of the Bamalaki objected on the ground that circumcision was the custom of the Jews. Kakungulu replied, "If that is so, from now on I am a Jew (Muyudaya)".

This was in 1919. He was then circumcised and he himself performed the rite of circumcision on his eldest son whom he called Juda. All his other children, born later, were circumcised on their eighth day. Kakungulu encouraged his followers to be circumcised and to adopt Judaism. Many of them did so. At the same time, Kakungulu continued to believe in the New Testament and kept many of the Christian rites.

All this terror supposedly was to be eliminated under Eisenhower's "assumptions" and Lester Pearson's mediation when the United Nations Forces were stationed in areas returned to Egypt by Israel after one of the greatest military feats in history.

Just the opposite, however. These occurrences persisted, and still do, since this diplomatic compromise was consummated — a compromise in large measure due to the intervention of Canada's then Foreign Minister Lester Pearson.)

Instead of channeling his energies toward building a sound, healthy economy, Nasser resumed his role as agent of a new "progressive" imperialist power in the Middle East. He tried to undermine, and often succeeded, peaceloving rulers in the area. In his racialist appeal to the Arabs, he cultivated the lowest instincts of chauvinism under the mask of "Arab socialism". Only last week, in a proclamation to the Arabs, did he blast President Bourguiba of Tunisia and King Hussein of Jordan as "traitors."

Nasser constantly committed acts of aggression, defying the charter of the United Nations.

One vivid example is Yemen. The most recent case is his preparation to snatch Aden, a vital port between the Indian Ocean and the Mediterranean, upon Britain's evacuation.

One must question Nasser's right to control Syrian or Yemenite policy, or, for that matter, to participate in the formulation of the activities of countries in the Arab West — unless one accepts the Hitlerite theory that the "fuehrer of all Arabs" has the right to control the destiny of all Arabs.

In this chaos and these fratricidal wars caused by Nasser in the Arab world, no one seems to remember that Israel never took any territory from Egypt, Syria or Iraq. Therefore, why should Egypt or Syria harass Israel?

Again, such theory can be accepted only when one subscribes to a racial principle that every Arab speaking nation is subject to the leadership of the fuehrer in Cairo. And the saddest aspect of all is the fact that an important Socialist power encourages this demagoguery and playing with fire.

* * * * *

Following the most recent evacuation of the Gaza Strip, one important fact has been overlooked: no sooner had the United Nations Forces retreated, then Nasser officially turned over the patroling of the Gaza border to the so-called Palestine Liberation Organization, a terrorist group, an outgrowth of the Fedayeen.

This may imply that Cairo now will recognize this organization as a regime responsible for this territory; any incidents and terrorist expeditions originating there will be ascribed to this group. It can become very serious should this organization declare itself a sort of "government of Palestine". It must but lead to war — unless thwarted immediately.

Secretary Martin's activity in the Suez area during the last week moved me deeply. Mr. Pearson's statement was very clear. Mr. U Thant, however, had no right to yield the policing of these borders to a government which received it in trust on the above-mentioned "assumptions".

* * * * *

Canada's role during recent days has been a noble one. Still Prime Minister Pearson ought to remember that in 1956 the entire pressure upon Israel to evacuate this area was largely his idea. In fact, he received the Nobel Prize for Peace essentially because of his part in the Sinai crisis.

Israel could have remained there had it behaved as do its enemies. It could have ignored all appeals, endured a boycott for several months and finally prevailed in a fait accompli.

Nasser, in his policies, follows the fait accompli theory; up to now he has been successful.

Israel trusted Pearson, had confidence in the United Nations. Now it is faced by a more serious crisis because of its faith in humanity.

* * * * *

I am sure that Mr. Pearson, known for his international conscience, realizes he has a moral obligation in this situation no less than has the government of the United States. And because of this, some quiet diplomacy is being exercised at this moment to prevent a catastrophe.

One fact is certain: Israel will not commit suicide to solidify Nasser's position, nor will it be satisfied with new "assumptions". The first shot from Gaza, the first attack against an Israeli ship may ignite the fire we all dread.

I repeat: to a certain extent this post-Sinai arrangement in the Middle East is Mr. Pearson's baby; I'm sure he is aware of it. I sensed it in his expression of outrage at what Mr. U Thant did in his coup de grace to the United Nations.

Visit Israel
in the 19th year of Statehood
When Israel was only three years old, her proud flag flew from a Greek Line ship in the port of Haifa. This makes us old friends indeed! We were the first to establish regular service to Israel with the two largest, fastest ships in Mediterranean service—the magnificent OLYMPIA and luxurious QUEEN ANNA MARIA. Only the Greek Line goes from New York to Israel every two weeks, arriving in Haifa in time for all major religious holidays, celebrations, festivities and cultural events.
The Greek Line Golden Route is international elegance. Thousands of feet of sun-drenched decks, open air swimming pools, luxurious public rooms, movies, entertainment. Hebrew lessons, travelogues, lectures on Israel. Continental cuisine or gourmet Kosher meals under strict supervision of a Mashgiach. A Rabbi and Synagogue grace both our ships.
Special savings of up to 20% on our Houseparty Sailings, low group fares and excursion fares, all-inclusive tours. Sail the Golden Route to Israel via Portugal, Italy, Greece, Cyprus. See your Travel Agent.

THE LIVELY ARTS

theater, film, music

by D. COHN

* Impressario Kalman Ginsburg of Israel is in Europe to sign up artists for the coming season.

* One of the world's most illustrious conductors, Dr. Otto Klemperer, now in London, has attended synagogue services recently for the first time in almost seventy years, according to the London Jewish Chronicle.

Wearing his own talis, Dr. Klemperer participated in several Sabbath services at the Orthodox Marble Arch Synagogue. Later he invited Cantor Lerer to visit him at his hotel. The famous conductor, about whom it has been rumored that he had converted to Catholicism, regretted he had not been to a synagogue since he was thirteen. "I am a Jew," he said emphatically.

Klemperer's presence in the synagogue is of particular interest and significance because it finally disproves the reports that this great 81-year-old conductor has been converted to Catholicism, noted the Chronicle.

* The dance scenes in Thoroughly Modern Millie are strictly Jewish. And, if one watches closely, he will recognize Mickey Katz who plays the clarinet.

* Up the Down Staircase, the Warner Bros. motion picture selected as the official U. S. entry in the International Film Festival in Moscow in July, will open key engagements in leading theaters throughout Canada and the United States on June 28th. Sandy Dennis stars. Belle Kaufman, a classroom teacher for seventeen years who wrote the play, was the film's technical adviser.

* Principal photography has been completed on the Warner Bros. motion picture production of Camelot, starring Richard Harris, Vanessa Redgrave, Franco Nero and David Hemmings. Jack L. Warner is producer; Joshua Logan, director.

* Oded Kotler of Israel won the Best Actor Award at the Cannes Film Festival last Friday for his part in Three Days and a Child. It was directed by Uri Zohar.

The film, which received a warm reception, reveals the obsession of a young Jerusalem girl for a former lover, by now married, who returns and aks her to take care of his child for three days.

Kotler, 20, primarily is a stage actor. His part in the picture was his first important screen role.

* Harold Prince doesn't intend to sit back and enjoy his laurels from Fiddler on the Roof, and, Cabaret. He is busy trying to produce next season a musical version of Billy Liar - an American conception, of course, He will produce and stage it.

* Barbra Streisand just has finished taping her next TV spectacle, The Belle of 14th Street, opposite Jason Robards, which will be telecast in the fall.

Her main topic of interest, though, is her son, Jason Emanuel Gould, born on December 29, 1966. He's 26 inches long, weighs 13 pounds, 4 ounces. "The doctor says he'll probably grow up to six-foot four; I'm just afraid it'll be seven feet!"

* A Korean girl and an Israeli violinst were named first prize winners last week in the 25th international competition of the Edgar M. Leventritt Foundation in New York.

Miss Kyung Wha Chung, 19, from Korea and Pinchas Zuckerman, 18, from Israel were selected from among the four finalists at a concert at Carnegie Hall.

The competition is held either for pianists or violinists. This is the first time two Leventritt winners have been named. Each will receive the full first prize of $1,000. Winner of the award is guaranteed appearances as soloist with nine major symphony orchestras. But it was not yet determined how the symphony engagements would be broken up between the two winners.

The award is not automatic. It is given when the judges feel that the winner is qualified to start a major career immediately.

Zuckerman, a student at Juilliard School, began to play when he was eight. He has held an American-Israeli Cultural Foundation scholarship since he was nine. In 1961, on the recommendation of Pablo Cassals and Isaac Stern, he was sent to the U. S. for further studies.

Zuckerman has won scholarships from the Sharett Fund for Young Artists. Yitzhak Perlman, who won the competition in 1964, also was a Sharett Fund winner.

WHAT A COMBINATION! - Comedian Buddy Hackett and Crooner Eddie Fisher, who will appear at Toronto's O'Keefe Center the week of June 5th.

WILL ENTERTAIN AT BALL - Israeli-born, popular singer, Rivka Raz, who is featured guest artist at Israel Bonds Anniversary Ball, Monday evening, June 12th. Miss Raz starred in the Israeli version of My Fair Lady.

Toronto Women Discuss New Role In Volunteer Work

"If you want something done, get the women to do it. You don't know what a force the women are." Thus stated Mrs. Lita Rose Betcherman, director of the Women's Bureau, who, as guest speaker at the annual meeting of the Federated Jewish Women's Organizations held recently at Toronto's Temple Sinai, quoted a high ranking government official when she spoke of the new role expected to be played by women of the Jewish community in volunteer work.

She told the capacity crowd of delegates and guests from thirty-four member organizations: "As your children grow older, there are increasing numbers of hours to be filled.

"In relationship, the volunteer organization has become the women's vehicle. Volunteer work is the most suitable outside activity to combine with home duty. It suits the married woman from the point of view of hours of work and nature of work."

Mrs. Betcherman continued: "We hear the government is taking over in these fields. Let me assure you that volunteer work is receiving government recognition as never before."

Referring to the leisure time and many ladies, she said: "Not only is it your duty to yourselves to operate at maximum capacity but, if you don't, you are wasting the most precious wealth of our country - its human resources.

"You are a link," she went on, "between professionals and the people. Volunteers bring sympathy and enrichment to those in need of help. Also, often the professional worker can't reach the people as well as the volunteer. As for professional resistance to the latter, once exposed, they are appreciated."

Mrs. Betcherman concluded: "The new approach to the volunteer includes orientation courses and leadership training. One must give the volunteer a sense of worth. Perhaps it is better for a woman in organizational work to specialize. I suggest that the woman who is selective about her volunteer activities and plans can build up a sequence of experience which will increase her skills and provide deeper satisfaction in her volunteer career."

Mrs. Abraham Levine, president of the Federation who welcomed the guests, stated: "It is up to us, the Jewish women of this community, to be anxious, to care, to do something about the things with which we are concerned. We must possess insight, we must be creative, we must build, we must preserve Judaism, its cultures and values.

"Action - here and now - was the guiding light that prompted the Women's Service Council of the United Jewish Welfare Fund to sponsor the inaugural meeting of the President's Council in 1958.

"The Council had hoped to form, at the time, a Federation of Women's Organizations to meet the need to unite and cooperate with the efforts of the Jewish women of Toronto."

Mrs. Levine continued: "The original meeting had a representation of ten organizations; today there are thirty-four. We eagerly look forward to the day when all Jewish women's organizations will be associated with the Federation.

"It is difficult to measure the tangible contribution of the Federation made in the Jewish and non-Jewish community. But we can account for the intangible terms of deeper understanding, better communication and more knowledge of our Jewish community and how it serves our people," she concluded.

KING HEROD CITY WILL HOST GIANT ISRAEL ART FETE

Caesarea, Israel -- Nearly 20 centuries ago King Herod founded this city in honor of his Roman rulers, and then proceeded to make it one of the most lavish ports in the Eastern Mediterranean.

Today most of Caesarea sleeps beneath six feet of silt and sand, deposited through the years by the unconcerned passage of time. The Crusader city, built atop the Roman ruins in the 12th century, and the ancient Roman theater, however, have been reclaimed by Israeli archaeologists, and it is in this Roman theater that the Annual Israel Summer Festival is centered.

An impressive variety of renowned artists have appeared at the Festival during its short six year history and last year alone 70,000 persons attended performances during the Festival month. In addition to the Caesarea performances, others are staged in Jerusalem and at "Kibbutzim", cooperative settlements, throughout the country.

This year's Festival, the seventh, will include Isaac Stern, Leonard Rose, Eugene Istomin, the Alvin Ailey Dance Theater of America and the Kathakali Dance Theater of India and others. Israeli groups such as the Israel Philharmonic Orchestra will also appear.

The Festival begins on July 30 and runs throughout the month of August.

German-Israeli Co-operation

Tel Aviv, (JCNS) - Increased co-operation in the search for Nazi war criminals, and better use of Israeli witnesses and documents in trials in West Germany, are the main results of the German-Israeli talks which took place here last week between Dr. Adalbert Rueckerl, the director of the Ludwigsburg central documentation office, and the Israeli police and Yad Vashem.

Dr. Rueckerl told the JCNS correspondent of his surprise at the detailed documentation which he fould kept at Yad Vashem and at Kibbutz Lochamei Hagetaot and by the police.

He came here for an eleven-day visit to enable the West German legal authorities to renew their investigation of several former Nazis suspected of murder.

Charter Plan

Haifa, (JCNS) - Plans to charter the liner Theodor Herzl to a foreign company for service outside Israel with an Israeli crew, and the operation of the car ferry Bilu also in winter, are being considered by the Government and the Zim Navigation Company.

It is understood that negotiations for the charter of the Theodor Herzl have already opened. It is also learned that the trade talks concluded with the Rumanian Government included the possibility of cooperation in some fields of shipping, presumably the operation of Israeli cruise ships to Constanza and other Black Sea ports.

ATTENDED EXECUTIVE BOARD LUNCHEON. - The following key members of the executive board, Toronto Women's Division, State of Israel Bonds, who attended an executive board luncheon, Thursday, May 18th, at the Primrose Club: (left to right) Mrs. Lea S. Singer, director of the Women's Division; Mrs. Irving Poslums, immediate past chairman; Mrs. Max Glassman, sponsor chairman; Mrs. Irving Sussman, associate chairman, Women's Division; Mrs. Mendel Israelson, chairman, Women's Division; Mrs. Hilda Leibo, international director, Women's Division; Mrs. Morris Zweig, national vice president, Women's Division; Mrs. Ralph Zamonsky, executive council.

Mrs. Leibo, guest speaker, analyzed Israel's current economic situation, clarifying the role of Israel Bonds as the "vital source of development funds, essential to every phase of life in Israel." She also lauded the pace setting role played by Toronto's Women's Division in the success last year of the tribute dinners initiated for outstanding women leaders on behalf of State of Israel Bonds.

Mrs. Israelson chaired the session.

BAZAAR

The annual bazaar held by Toronto Pioneer Women, Monday, May 15th, was a success, according to the organization. Mrs. June Sills of Centennial House spoke on the information at Centennial House available for celebrating Centennial year.

CULMINATING EVE

Sisterhood of Beth Am Synagogue will hold its culminating Sisterhood evening Saturday, June 3rd, at the synagogue.

DONOR DINNER

* Beth Emeth Bais Yehuda Sisterhood held its donor dinner recently in honor of those ladies who raised money for Sisterhood.

Mrs. Frank Warner chaired the evening; Mrs. Joseph Kelman played the national anthems; Mrs. George Foxman delivered the D'var Torah; Rabbi Joseph Kelman said the Hamotzi; Canto Zvee Aroni sang the Misheberakh and led in Grace.

Mrs. Manny Okrent, president, delivered a message; Mrs. Harvey Goldenberg gave a donor report. Rabbi Kelman presented the donor awards. Phyllis Panet, guest singer, entertained.

* Sisterhood's closing dinner meeting will take place on Monday, May 29th. New board members will be installed.

EXEC MEET

The Women's League of Beth Jacob Girls High School recently held an executive meeting in the board room of the school. Mrs. Hela Nussbaum, president, served as chairman. She mentioned the general meeting held last Tuesday evening.

Also announced was the date of the closing luncheon - June 20th.

The recently held auction sale was a success.

The weekly Wednesday evening swimming classes are being held, as are the meetings of the Tuesday morning discussion group on: The Jew and His Home.

INSTALLATION MEET

The annual installation meeting of the Parents Association of the Toronto Hebrew Day School was held last Tuesday evening in the school auditorium.

Besides the installation of the new executive, featured were the presentation of awards to grade 9 girls and presentation of awards to volunteer librarians.

Two plays were presented: In English, The Dear Departed, produced and directed by Calvin Plener; in Hebrew, under the direction of Mrs. Miriam Schneid.

Refreshments were served.

TEA

The annual tea tendered by Sisterhood of Shaarei Shomayim will be held on Tuesday May 30th. Convenors are Mesdames Lil Goldenberg and Alma Waldman; hostess, Mrs. Sydney Greenstein.

MITZVAH DINNER

B'nai Israel Beth David Sisterhood held its ninth annual Mitzvah (donor) dinner last evening. Mrs. Syd Brody, chairman, welcomed the guests. Rabbi Albert Pappenheim made the invocation.

Mrs. Sam Shulman, president of Sisterhood, brought greetings. Rabbi Pappenheim presented tokens to members who have reached various levels of fundraising.

Highlight was the presentation of a musical, Let's Si Si Spain, written and directed by Stephen Witkin. Cast included: Syd Jacobs; Helen Pilch; Marilyn Tennenbaum; Alf Pilch; Shirley Vernon; Aida Goldberg; Jack Gertzbein; Judy Colt; Phyllis Miller; Ruby Marks; Wilf Yaphe; Mona Brown; Marian Brody; Libby Taub; Enid Muchnik; Belle Yaphe. Libby Taub was producer; Sydell Zablow, pianist; Rose Adler, costumes; Rose Spigelman, makeup; Gordon Jacobs, lighting; Florence Rosen and Shirley Vernon, choreography.

TEA

Hadassah-Wizo held its Book of Life and Aunt's Tea recently at the home of Mrs. Samuel Kelmer. Contributors of $25 and more attended.

Receiving at the Tea were Mrs. Bernard Mayer, president, Mrs. Murray Herman, chairman, Mrs. Kelner. Ima pins were presented to Mesdames Mark A. Levy, Max Tanenbaum, Joseph Firestone, Morris Orfus, Isadore Rosenthal.

THEATER

Last week Hadassah Drama Group presented at the Hydro three original plays: Abram in Egypt, by Ruth Teitel; The Dinner Guest, by Evelyn Wolfe; Wait Till Morning, by Zelda Eisen. Director, Adam Ludwig; producer, Lil Platt, founder of the Hadassah Drama group.

HOSTESS

At the request of Mrs. Zalman Shazar, wife of the president of Israel, Pioneer Women's Organization of Canada has been designated official hostess during her visit to Canada. She has expressed a wish to meet Pioneer leaders in Toronto.

For security reasons, only 25 women will be permitted to meet Mrs. Shazar.

Time Creeps Up

By Ruthie

You know, you can fool people sometimes in many respects. Like, for instance, age — if you don't look too closely.

You can clip off a few years if you color the gray in your hair; you can smile like an idiot to keep your drooping jawline from sagging; you can run even if you have to bite your lips from yelling, ouch! You can do lots of things to cover up the passing of time. But whom do you think you're fooling?

* * * * *

I used to think Mama was exaggerating because she always complained she couldn't sleep. I never could understand her. Why, just the touch of a feather landed me in dreamland.

Now? To tell you the truth, I hate to admit it.

First of all, I can sit for hours on a chair thinking about going to bed — but not budging. Somehow I can't collect the energy to pick myself up. My eyes actually droop yet I don't go to sleep.

Then, with a long drawn zifts (sigh), I finally stand up, stretch, yawn and prepare for slumber.

I'm so tired, I'm sure I'll fall asleep the minute I tumble into bed.

Do I? Huh! The second my head hits the pillow, a million thoughts enter my mind.

Did I take the steak out of the freezer so it'll thaw overnight? Are the kids covered? Did I lock the side door? I don't remember. Is the bathroom light on, just in case? I must not forget to press a gym suit before I wake the kids.

I toss, turn and twist.

I must have fallen asleep because, next thing I know, I'm wide awake, not too tired, and raring to go.

I look at the clock. Only two in the morning! Is that all!

So I'm back in bed. I'm asleep — I figure.

I get up; I look again at the clock. It's three-thirty.

Why don't I sleep? Who's bothering me? When the kids were babies, I prayed for this. And now look.

Nu, so I'm in bed again. Ah!

But the "ah" changes to "oi" — a leg cramp, not wishing it on you.

Off I go again, quickly to the cold bathroom tiles. Nasser should feel like this!

Okay, the pain subsides and leaves me limp. So off to bed. It's only four-fifteen.

But who could sleep? My better half is whistling through his nose.

Ann Landers says, be glad your partner is there snoring.

Nu, so I'm glad. But if only he'd stop a little bit so I could shut an eye!

* * * * *

Good, it's quiet. So now I'm hungry.

Just a little something — derkvicken s'hartz (reviving the heart).

That little something takes maybe a half-hour.

Okay, I'm ready to sleep. I'm entitled. I've been up practically all night.

* * * * *

Back to bed. Just a little snooze.

Suddenly a hand nudges me — and not so gently.

"Mommy, Mommy, stop! You're snoring like a locomotive! It's seven-thirty and I'll be late for school."

So go say you've hardly slept. Who'll believe you?

As for snoring! Me? Stop kidding. I don't snore. Anyway, I don't believe it. I'm not getting that old already. Or am I?

* * * * *

As I said before, you can fool anybody sometimes. But not good, old Time.

BANANAS FLAMBEES

6 fresh, ripe bananas, sliced on the bias
Juice of half a lemon
1 cup brown sugar
1/4 pound (one stick) butter
1/2 tsp. cinnamon
1/4 cup cognac
Vanilla ice cream

Brush bananas with lemon juice. Melt brown sugar and butter in a flat chafing dish. Add bananas and cook until just tender.

Sprinkle bananas with cinnamon. Warm the cognac and add. Ignite and pour flaming over a ball of ice cream.

Yield: Six servings.

Announce New Healing Substance: Shrinks Piles

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissue.

In case after case, while gently relieving pain, actual reduction (shrinkage) took place.

Most important of all—results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue.

New Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H. Ask for it at all drug stores. Satisfaction or your money refunded.

WITH BLACK JEWS IN UGANDA

A further step which drew Kakungulu nearer towards Judaism occurred in 1926 when in Kampala he met a Jewish trader called Yusuf, with whom he established friendly ties. Yusuf was surprised by Kakungulu's Jewish leanings and, in compliance with the latter's request, started to teach him Jewish rites and customs. Kakungulu stayed with Yusuf a few months. He then invited him to his home in Mbale, where Yusuf spent a few weeks explaining the basic principles of Judaism to him.

Yusuf's visit brought about radical changes in the Bayudaya faith. Kakungulu ceased to believe in Jesus and in the New Testament. He instructed his followers to adhere only to the Old Testament.

He stopped using the word Mukama (Lord) which was associated with Jesus, and used the word (Yakuwa (Jehovah). Baptising by immersion was no longer practiced. All New Testament passages were omitted from the prayers. Work on a Sabbath was strictly forbidden and offenders were heavily fined.

According to Shimshon Mugembe Israeli, who still remembers Yusuf well, Kakungulu grew a beard like Yusuf, covered his head and wore clothes like those he had seen on Yusuf.

Yusuf taught Kakungulu and some of his followers the Hebrew alphabet. Jewish festivals were observed according to the Old Testament and Hebrew names for the months of the year were used.

Mr. Israeli remembered that Kakungulu later met two other Jews, Musa (Moses) in Kampala and Isaiah in Mbale. The latter was working as a supervisor with the East African Railways near Tororo (28 miles from Mbale), and recruited some of Kakungulu's followers for work on the railways. Both Moses and Isaiah instructed Kakungulu and his followers in Judaism.

By 1929, when Kakungulu died, the Bayudaya had increased to about 2,000 - the majority of them around the town of Mbale.

At the top of Gangama hill, the centre of the Bayudaya, three mud huts with tin roofs can be seen. Two of the structures are used as school rooms and the third as a synagogue. The synagogue which Kakungulu had built crumpled and was finally destroyed. The new synagogue, called the Moses Synagogue, is bare, the floor is earth and the mud walls are unplastered.

Two benches and one table are the only furniture. A giant drum stands near the main entrance and it is used to call the people to prayer. The prayers consist of various verses from the Old Testament in Luganda (the local language), among them several Psalms. Apart from the Moses Synagogue, there are five or six other small synagogues in the villages around. Shimshon Israeli, the leader of the congregation, leads the prayers in Moses Synagogue and Zakaio his deputy serves as Mohel.

In Mr. Israeli's house in Namanyoni, a large mezuza made of bamboo wood is fixed to the lintel of the door, and people entering kiss it. It was given to him by one of the Jews he met.

The religious discussions in Israel's house which took place whenever I visited him usually continued until after midnight and, the people present, asked me many questions about the Jewish laws of burial, marriage, circumcision, etc. The number of the Bayudaya has been much reduced since the death of Kakungulu. The children went to the Mission schools and received teaching in the Christian religion. Others abandoned the congregation because of the lack of adequate religious leadership and guidance.

I was surprised by Shimshon Israeli's profound knowledge of the Bible. He knew exactly which chapters and which verses of the Bible deal with the different Mitzvot. He knew by heart a great part of the Old Testament in the Luganda language. He also knew many of the details of the ritual laws, and used to calculate the timing of the various holidays on the basis of an old English Jewish Calendar which he possessed. I compared his dates with my Hebrew calendar and was astonished to find that his calculations were absolutely correct.

Every member of the congregation fasts on Yom Kippur and celebrates all the festivals mentioned in the Old Testament. Nobody eats bread during Passover. Israeli and the elders were anxious to learn about Jerusalem and asked whether the temple had been rebuilt yet.

During my meetings with them they always put forward various requests. They wanted to have Torah Scrolls, Talisim, and mezuzot and, if possible, a book of instruction in English which would enable them to know the main Mitzvot and laws of Judaism. They would translate it into the Luganda language.

Shimshon Israeli emphasised that the Bayudaya had no intention of emigrating to Israel. They considered themselves as loyal Ugandan Jews just as the English and American Jews. Israel they consider their religious centre.

The Bayudaya have some connection with the several international Jewish organisations. During my last visit to them at the end of 1966, I noticed that they were much encouraged by the interest shown in them by world Jewry. This was reflected by the increase in their number from 300 in 1962 to 500. They had some converts from among the Christians and Moslems living near by.

The Bayudaya's official letter heading now reads: "The Propagation Of Judaism In Uganda". Rabbi (as he calls himself) Shimshon Mugembe Israeli admitted to me that he is well aware that the Bayudaya still do not fulfil all the Jewish practices and laws, but this is the result of their long isolation from world Jewry and having nowhere to turn for guidance and instruction.

They have an ardent desire to be fully instructed in the precepts of Judaism and they would like to be as good and genuine Jews as any other Orthodox Jews in the world. With the connections recently established with world Jewry, they hope to reach their goal.

The Bayudaya are a unique phenomenon in the history of Judaism in Africa. Here is a Jewish community that sprang up by itself and in its early stages developed without any Jewish influence from outside. They came into being by the vision of one man, Semei Kakungulu, whose love and profound devotion to the Old Testament led him gradually to the Jewish faith.

1965 CJA CHAIRMEN

The following have been appointed chairmen of the 1967 Combined Jewish Appeal: Charles Bronfman; Morley M. Coyen; Samuel Sokoloff. Previously appointed associate chairmen are Thomas O. Hecht, Boris G. Levine, Sydney Maislin and Mrs. Arnold Fisher.

SCHOOL ROLL PETITION

Five Jewish residents of the Town of Mount Royal filed a petition in Quebec Provincial Court seeking their names on the Protestant School electoral list there. The petition was almost identical with one filed earlier in the week by three Jewish residents of Hampstead.

WORKERS HONORED

The Jewish People's School honored last week two senior citizens who have devoted more than thirty-five years of service to the Folkshule and still are active on its behalf.

Testimonials were presented to the school's 49th annual meeting to Sam Stipelman and Samuel Harvey who have passed their 80th and 90th birthday respectively.

A grade 8 class was announced for the fall, thus, with grade 7, enabling the development of a junior high school division.

Lawrence Gomulka is head teacher of the junior high and assistant to the principal.

ISRAEL PAVILION A SUCCESS

What is the secret of the overwhelming success of the Israel Pavilion? Hundreds of thousands of visitors already have passed through the attractive exhibition. Most impressive is the corner dedicated to the destruction of European Jewry, especially upon the younger generation who know so little about the Nazi atrocities. The ideas and planning of the Pavilion are worthy of full praise.

PLANT TREES

Recently the Organization of the Zaglembier Jews planted fifty trees in the Martyr's Forest of the JNF in the name of Father Zawadsky, Catholic priest, who saved many Jewish lives during the holocaust. He resides in Bendin, Poland, where he has celebrated his fiftieth anniversary in the clergy.

EDUCATIONAL TOUR

Last Tuesday more than 2,000 Jewish schoolchildren toured EXPO, which culminated in a meeting with Israeli president, Zalman Shazar, in front of the Israel Pavilion. The children, in grades 5 through 12 in Jewish day schools and Jewish afternoon schools in the Greater Montreal area, visited the Pavilion of Judaism, Canadian Pavilion, Quebec Pavilion, Pavilion of Israel which, that day, celebrated Israel National Day.

Arrangements were made by the Council of Jewish Educational Institutions of Montreal which is sponsored by Canadian Jewish Congress. Permission to attend was obtained from the Protestant School Board of Greater Montreal.

LECTURE

The suffering man and his life. This is the theme of the Book of Job, whose hero is the symbol of suffering humanity. Job is neither easy to study nor easy to teach. Therefore it is noteworthy that the Bible Circle of Keren Hatarbut, under the leadership of Dr. Mittleman, has succeeded in elucidating the Book of Job for its many participants.

Last lecture was by Osher Vilcher who elaborated upon Job's travail, skilfully using the techniques of geography, history and semantics.

EXIT YIDDISH PAPER

Last week Yiddish speaking Montreal suffered a severe blow: The Canadian Jewish Eagle, founded by the late Hirsch Wolofsky sixty years ago, ceased publication; May 14th was its final issue.

Rabbis, communal workers and community leaders are discussing the re-establishment of a new weekly bearing the same name. An early reappearance is hoped.

SILVER ANNIVERSARY

The Rabbinical College of Canada, Lubavitch, marked its twenty-fifth anniversary banquet with the closing of the $293 maintenance campaign last Sunday in the auditorium of the Yeshiva.

D. S. Dubin, Harry Gasco and Sam Landan headed the campaign.

A group of young scholars was ordained. Since the founding of the college, more than forty rabbis have received ordination.

Rabbi L. Kramer, founder and head of the institution, was praised for his dynamic leadership.

ANNIVERSARY SABBATH

On June 2nd and 3rd, Montreal synagogues and temples will observe the fiftieth anniversary Sabbath in honor of Allied Jewish Community Services, as was announced by Rabbi Mendel Lewittes for the Board of Jewish Ministers, Rabbi Irving Rosner for the Montreal District, Rabbinical Council of America, and Leonard Samuels for the Synagogue Council of Greater Montreal.

Meanwhile the entire Jewish community of Montreal was invited to attend the anniversary banquet Sunday evening, June 4th, by Jacob M. Lowy, president, and Cecil Usher, chairman of the 50th anniversary observance committee.

The dinner will be held at Chevra Kadisha-B'nai Jacob Synagogue, preceded by a cocktail reception at 6:15 p.m.

Guest speaker will be Prime Minister Daniel Johnson of Quebec. Samuel Bronfman, honorary president, and Mr. Lowy, current president of AJCS, also will speak.

OFFICERS

Louis Orenstein, Q.C. was elected president of the Eastern Region, Jewish Immigrant Aid Services of Canada, succeeding Bernard M. Bloomfield, at the annual meeting last month. JIAS is a constituent agency of Allied Jewish Combined Jewish Appeal through United Jewish Relief Agencies.

Other officers are: Hyman Rosenfeld, vice president and chairman of the executive committee; Eugene Stearns and Max Wolofsky, vice presidents; Daniel Morris, treasurer; Nat Cohen, secretary.

The meeting highlighted the observance of the twentieth anniversary of the arrival of the first group of Jewish war refugees in Canada. Joseph Kage, executive director, was honored for twenty years' service to JIAS. Graduation exercises of JIAS Citizenship School were held.

Secretary of State Judy Lamarsh was guest speaker.

IN MOVING APPEAL TO COMMUNITY: - Ben C. Milner, President of the Zionist-Revisionist Organization, Montreal, in a statement saluting President Shazar and the opening of the Israeli pavilion at Expo 67, called upon all Jews to stand behind beleaguered Israel. He said the President of Israel will return home with the conviction that this democratic country and the Jewish community are firmly convinced of the righteousness of the Jewish cause.

Associated Dinner Season's Highlight

One of the year's most festive events in Toronto will take place on Tuesday evening, June 6th: the Diamond Jubilee Dinner marking the sixtieth anniversary of the founding of the Associated Hebrew Schools.

Dr. Robert Gordis, well known author, scholar and lecturer, will be guest speaker. Author of eleven books in the field of biblical study and interpretive values in Judaism, Dr. Gordis also is a frequent contributor to many journals on this continent, Great Britain and Israel. He is professor of Bible at the Jewish Theological Seminary and has been spiritual leader of Temple Beth-El, Rockaway, New York. In 1950 he founded the Beth-El Day School, the first Conservative day school in North America.

Dr. Gordis will speak on: Blueprint for Tomorrow.

Joseph Levine, president of Associated, will deliver the presidential address wherein he will survey the history and achievements of Associated during its six decades of existence as well as enumerate the problems confronting this educational system and its plans for the future.

Nathan Silver is dinner chairman.

PRESENTATION OF PORTRAIT

An important feature will be the presentation of an oil portrait of the late J. Irving Oelbaum who was secretary of Associated from 1924-1928. Since 1934, and for the remainder of his life, he served as vice president of the Associated Hebrew Schools. Throughout his lifetime he was a staunch supporter of the school and a champion of the cause of Jewish education.

Presentation of the portrait will be made by Meyer W. Gasner, with members of the family responding.

CEREMONY OF MORTGAGE BURNING

Another highlight will be the ceremony of the burning of the mortgage on the main school building on Bathurst Street, thus symbolizing that the building is free of capitol the building is free of capital indebtedness. The ceremony will be carried out with the participation of Bernard Weinberg, Q.C.

INSTALLATION

Installation of officers and board members of the school, on the basis of biannual elections, will be effectuated by David E. Newman, Q.C., chairman of the nominations and elections committee.

SPECIAL GUESTS

The second graduating class of the Community Hebrew Academy of Toronto will be guests of Associated at the dinner. They will be introduced by the chairman of the Board of Education, Harold L. Dessen, C.A.

The Community Academy (Senior Day High School) is sponsored by the United Jewish Welfare Fund of Toronto.

POSTHUMOUS TRIBUTE TO A GREAT LEADER. – The late J. Irving Oelbaum, one of the most respected leaders of Toronto's Jewish community, whose memory will be honored by the presentation of an oil portrait to the Associated Hebrew Schools at the Diamond Jubilee Dinner, Tuesday evening, June 6th.

HONORED

Paris, (JCNS) - Dr. Vidal Modiano, the president of Crif, (Representative Council of French Jewry) was appointed an officer of the French Legion of Honour.

Among other French Jews honoured by the French Government were: M. Jacques Valensi, professor of science at Marseilles University; the writer Madame Simone Armand de Caillavet, wife of M. André Maurois, a member of the French Academy; and Bertrand Schwartz, professor of science at Nancy University.

CONTRIBUTES TO UJA – (left) Joseph Levine, president of Toronto's Associated Hebrew Schools, receives a check of $900.00 from Arnold Kravetz, grade 13 student of the Community Hebrew Academy of Toronto, on behalf of Toronto's United Jewish Appeal.

The contribution was made at the school's annual Israel Independence Day celebration. Funds were raised by students of the Junior Day High School of Associated and the Community Hebrew Academy as part of the UJA campaign now in full swing in the city's Jewish schools.

Levitt Heads Hamilton J.N.F.

The Hamilton Council of the Jewish National Fund has elected Norman Levitt, President for 1967-68.

Mr. Levitt recently served as chairman of the highly succesful Hamilton Negev Dinner honouring Irving Zucker.

He succeeds Irwin Lyons who becomes Chairman of the Board.

Other officers elected were: Vice-pres., Sidney Pollock; 2nd Vice-pres., Morris Paikin; Secretary, Jack Tatlor; Treasurer, Albert Minden.

Committee Chairmen are: Jack Mandel, Max Stein, Cecil Feldman, Abe Chertkoff, Lou Levy, Mrs. Louis Schwartz, Paul Hanover, Len Miller, Saul Smurlick, Mrs. Ben Shekter and Mrs. David Polan. SPECIAL SUPPLEMENT ON THE OCCASION OF THE OFFICIAL VISIT OF PRESIDENT ZALMAN SHAZAR

TORONTO AND MONTREAL

FRIDAY, MAY 26, 1967

Governor-General Roland Michener welcomes President Shazar to Ottawa

Israel Pavillion at Expo

TO THE PEOPLE OF CANADA

I am very happy to be in Canada on the occasion of Canada's Centennial and to represent the State of Israel at the Celebration.

Israel wants peace. We trust that peace will be maintained.

ZALMAN SHAZAR
President of Israel

CANADA AND FREEDOM:

by LEVI ESHKOL
Premier of Israel

The story of Canada, in its emergence and growth, is a chronicle of human liberty and creative national upbuilding. As such it has many an inspiring lesson for freedom-loving nations everywhere. Enriched by an almost ceaseless influx of immigrant newcomers, Canada, like Israel, has offered succour, shelter and democratic freedom to men and women in search of liberty and new opportunities. It was inevitable, therefore, that a spontaneous dialogue of amity should spring up between ourselves and the Canadian nation even as we struggled and fought for our own national independence.

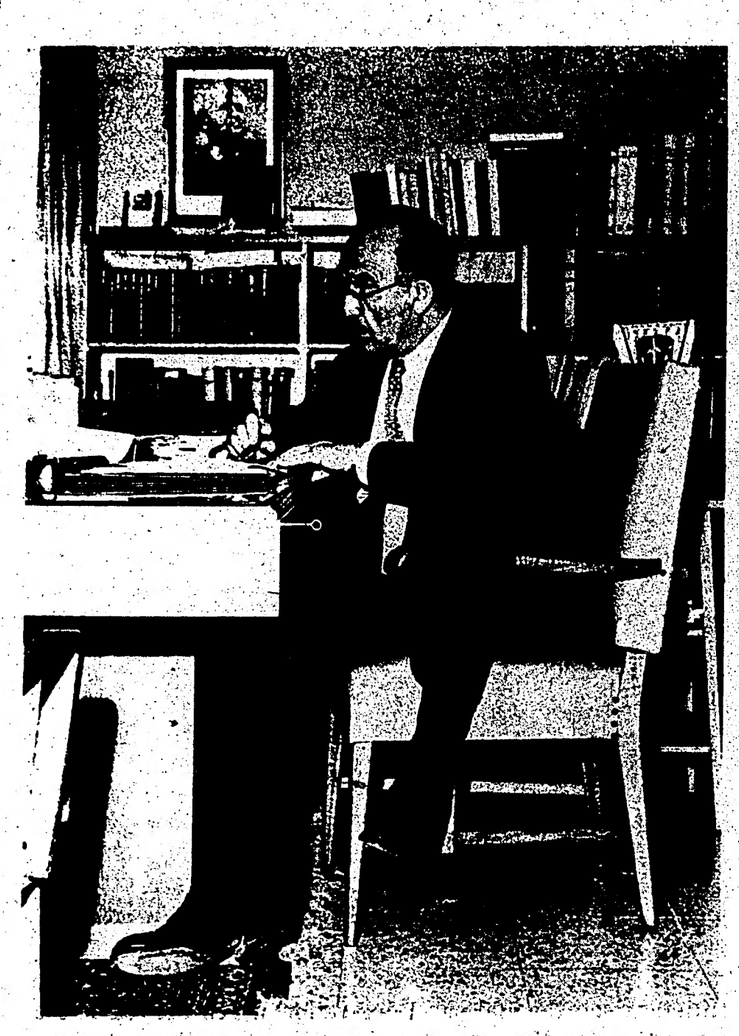
Moved by the same impulse of democratic freedom, inspired by a common credo of international peace and cooperation, and endowed with a similar ethos of nation-building, Canada and Israel are linked by bonds of enduring understanding and common purpose that antidate the revival of our sovereign statehood.

With gratitude we do recall the sympathy and support accorded by Canada to our cause during that fateful period of uncertainty at the end of 1947. Ever since, the ties of understanding and friendship have been strengthened, nurtured further by the mutual experience, each within its own limits of dimension and strength, of national development, and dedication to the mission of peace and international responsibility.

The Israel pavillion which has arisen on the grounds of Expo '67, the universal exposition in Montreal marking the Centennial, gives graphic expression to the affinity of spirit binding our two nations and reflects, too, the kinship and fraternity between the Canadian Jewish community and the people of Israel.

The tale the Israel exhibition relates is that of an ancient scattered nation which, through its own unrelenting efforts, has reentered the mainstream of history through the revival of its sovereign independence in its ancient homeland. It tells of exiles ingathered, the rehabilitation of a people, a land and a culture, of great sacrifice, of impressive achievement, of the quest for peace, and of the challenges that still have to be met. In it is enshrined the dream which has sustained our nation throughout its twenty centuries of wandering, the prophetic message of spiritual and moral fortitude, human justice and neighbourly love.

President Shazar on his visit to Canada will salute of Canada in the name of us personally the great people all.



Premier Eshkol in his Jerusalem office studies dispatches from world capitals dealing with present crisis.

ISRAEL AND OUR CENTENNIAL

This supplement devoted to Israel stresses the Jewish State's continuous progress and its friendship with Canada. Even in these days of tension it presents Israel as it is: a nation of peace, a paradise for tourists, a land of free men. It is published as a contribution to Israel's participation at Expo '67.

OUR AIM IS PEACE

"A wise man ...maketh...his enemies to be at peace with him..."

by ZALMAN SHAZAR President of Israel

The harmony in which we wish to live with our neighbours is very slow in coming. All our attempts to cooperate and to communicate, even in the slightest, with them, have not yet borne fruit, and if hatred against us no longer assures them of unity among themselves, it is still far from weakening. The tension along our borders has been acute this year; infiltrators continue to operate; frontier settlements are still exposed to bullets and shells from the ridges above and their fields and pathways mined.

All honour and all blessings go to the Defense Army of Israel for the heroism with which it frustrates evil designs and preserves our land from damage and destruction. May the Guardian of Israel watch over our armed forces and keep all evil from them and us.

In the inner life of our State this last year we have been sorely tried by the stringent efforts made to heal our economy, which have brought suffering and unemployment to many. The Government and communal institutions have done and are doing much to relieve distress through planned public works and encouragement of industry, but there has not yet been parallel development of large-scale volunteer help of the sort that was no true a source of pride to us in earlier periods of trial. Let us together share the burden and effort accompanying the economic transition through which the country is now passing. The most earnest and eager attention must be given to every proposal for sharing the burden with all who are employed and self-supporting.

Let us not forget this year, too, that ours is a land of immigration, and that, even though the stream is now weaker, newcomers continue to come; even from affluent countries and from those whose Jewish communities are torn by alienation and longing, some reach us - first swallows heralding a change, and not to be deterred, we hope, by the temporary difficulties of recession.

May Israel find the defenders of its economy and its continued aliya no less stalwart and no less dependable than the defenders of its national security. This is the hour for its faithful friends in the Diaspora to summon up initiative, knowledge and vigour for the reinforcement of our own endeavour here.

Even in these days of trial there are promising signs of growing economic health. Our balance of payments has improved with the narrowing of the gap between imports and exports. Our foreign markets have expanded; our agriculture has become increasingly advanced; our mechanization intensified. Our labour productivity has increased and tourism expands. Our non-Jewish citizens are becoming more closely knit into the national fabric; military government has been abolished and the development of the minority villages proceeds swiftly. All honour to every creative and helpful hand everywhere in the land!

We must devote ever greater attention to the advancement of education and culture, of tradtional learning and knowledge among all sectors of the nations systematic, deep-rooted training of youth, wide-spread, authentic, folk culture for the masses of adults. Let us not become reconciled to spiritual relapse and the dangers of moral decline. In the realm of the spirit let us not be easily contented. For if the roots grow weak, our plants may not be strong enough to withstand the storms that assail them and the seasons of temporary distress. Nor is there any more effective shield against the growing enticements of wealthier lands than profound attachment to the legacy of Israel, to our living culture, to the landscape of our country. Let us open our hearts to the treasures left by those who preceded us, and strengthen all the creative spirits of every sort who live among us today.

Our relations with the world outside us and with far-flung communities of Jewry have expanded and deepened and demand even further intensification and expansion. Cordial visits by and to us - visits both official and individual, diplomatic and economic, literary and scientific - have aroused the lethargic and even evoked striking manifestations of ardent mass response. Although in most Diaspora centres assimilation and indifference still have the upper hand, they continue to be restrained by the elements of devotion and revival, aided by concentration around the State of Israel and its values. There is a growing movement towards Hebrew, religious and national education, and a growing number of students from the Diaspora enrolled in Israel's institutions of higher learning - universities, seminaries, yeshivot. Israeli experts working in scores of developing countries, have won respect and affection; Israeli scientists have earned distinction for themselves and their nation both by research done in their laboratories and studies and by participation in international conferences, a number of which during this last year were held in Israel itself.

And Israel's Hebrew literature is increasingly making its way beyond the borders of the country, becoming known in translation to Jewish and non-Jewish readers over the seas, and this year for the first time winning, through its great representative, the glory of a Nobel Prize.

May the entire year before us reflect the radiance of those historic anniversaries it includes: the seventieth since the first Zionist Congress was convened by Theodor Herzl, moulder in our generation of the idea of the Jewish State; the fiftieth since the Balfour Declaration which served as the foundation for the mass immigration and settlement of the future; the twentieth since our first eleven villages were set up in the desolate Negev, waiting to this day for its full fructification. And tomorrow will mark the beginning of the twentieth year since the rise of the revived State of Israel.

The achievements of our pioneer predecessors will, we trust, shed their light upon us to infuse greater strength into the doing of our deeds and the elevation of our spirit. May we learn to open our hearts to unity and mutual respect among our people, subduing the passion for fragmentation and disintegration that has taken hold of our community on every side, and supporting all who make for closeness and unification. And despite the pangs of defense and in the very midst of defense, let our hand be extended - continue to be extended - in blessing and peace to all our neighbours roundabout.

We pray that it will be given to us to see with our own eyes what the wisest of men declared in his Proverb:

"When a man's ways please the Lord, He maketh even his enemies to be at peace with him."

May the peace we so hope and long for, draw nearer and come to us in this next year - the twentieth year of the independence of the State of Israel.

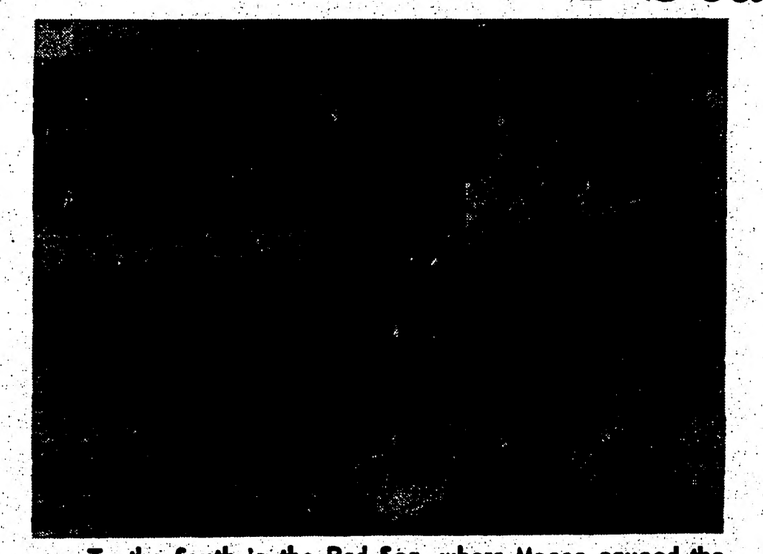
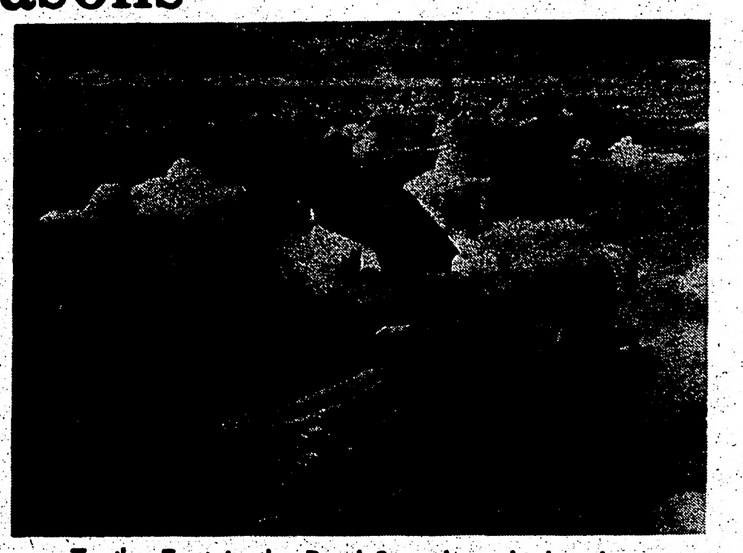
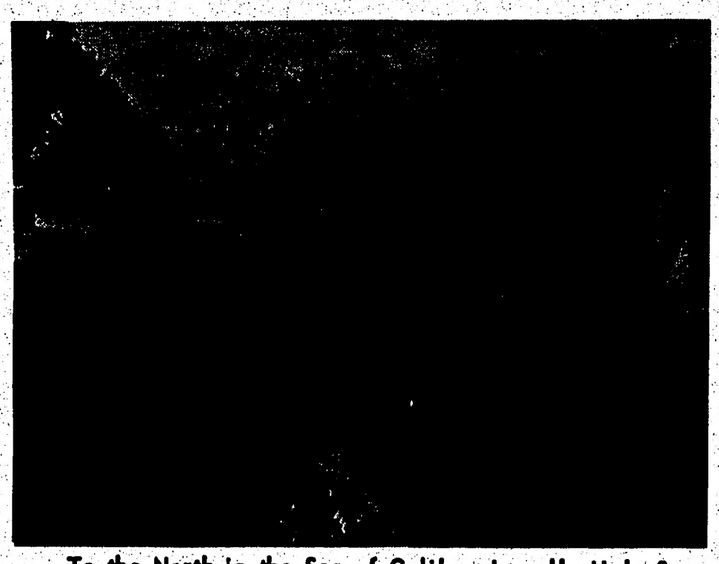
4 Seas for 4 Seasons



To the South is the Red Sea, where Moses caused the waters to part and where today European fugitives from winter, frolic in the warm water.



To the East is the Dead Sea whose high salt content makes floating easy and swimming difficult.



To the North is the Sea of Galilee, Israel's Holy Sea, an inland lake with a significance vastly greater than its size.

To the West is the Mediterranean Sea where cities like Philitine Ashkelon and Roman Caesarea today serve the fun loving modern population of Israel.

A Singing Country, Despite everything

FESTIVAL UNINTERRUPTED

By a special correspondent

Israel is a singing country. This is one of the facts frequently observed by visitors to the country, as they hear song pouring forth from buses carrying excursionists, from the throats of marching soldiers, from kibbutz children working the fields.

The singing is mostly done in groups, either ad hoc or organised. No school, youth village or settlement is without its choir.

With people originating in some one hundred different countries, the musical diet cannot be anything but rich. Many may not have been able to bring with them much in the way of earthly goods, but songs they brought in profusion.

Israel's composers are steadily contributing to this treasure-house of song, and more often than not their compositions are closer to the realm of folklore than that of pop-songs. Favourite subjects are the beauty of the country and events from the Bible. In the latter case they go straight to the source for their lyrics.

In July of this year, Israel's choirs will be hosts for the sixth time to choirs from other countries. Since 1952, the Zimriya or World Assembly of Choirs has been taking place in the country at intervals of three years. (The word Zimriya has been coined from the Hebrew "Zemer" - song). However, the idea for the event was conceived much earlier, and it took shape in the head of the man who is still today its executive director, Aharon Zvi Propes.

In 1936 Propes started to plan a world conference, in what then was Palestine, of members of Jewish youth choirs in the Diaspora who were to settle in the country. Nothing came of the project because of the disturbances which broke out in Palestine and because of the war clouds gathering in Europe.

In 1948, when Propes joined the Government Tourist Corporation of the new State of Israel, the Corporation took a hand in founding the "Hazamir" (nightingale in Hebrew) Society as an instrument for organising Jewish folk singing festivals in Israel.

Preparations for the first Zimriya took much longer than had been expected. Propes knocked at every door, approached Israel Embassies and Jewish Agency offices in different countries, visited the centres of Diaspora Jewry, established connections, and helped organise choirs and committees to support them.

Finally, in 1952, his dream became reality and the first Zimriya took place. Since then, the Zimriya has become part of the Israel cultural scene. In the past 15 years there has been a great deal of development and change, both in size and in scope, in form and in content.

The principal aims of the Zimriya are the spreading of Hebrew and Jewish songs around the world, the fostering of folksongs of all nations, and the strengthening of relations between choirs all over the world.

The first two Zimriyot (plural) were made up of Jewish choirs only. The turning point was the third Zimriya, when the first non-Jewish choir, from France, journeyed to Israel. Since then, the roster of choirs has became greatly diversified, and this year's event will include 19 groups from Bulgaria, Canada, Denmark, England, France, Greece, Holland, Italy, Sweden, U.S.A., and Yugoslavia, one thousand voices in all. They will be joined by ten Israel choirs, making for a mighty sound of 1500 voices.

"The most musically potent countries this year are Sweden and the U.S.A. each represented by four choirs, Greece is sending three, France and England two each, while the others are more exclusive.

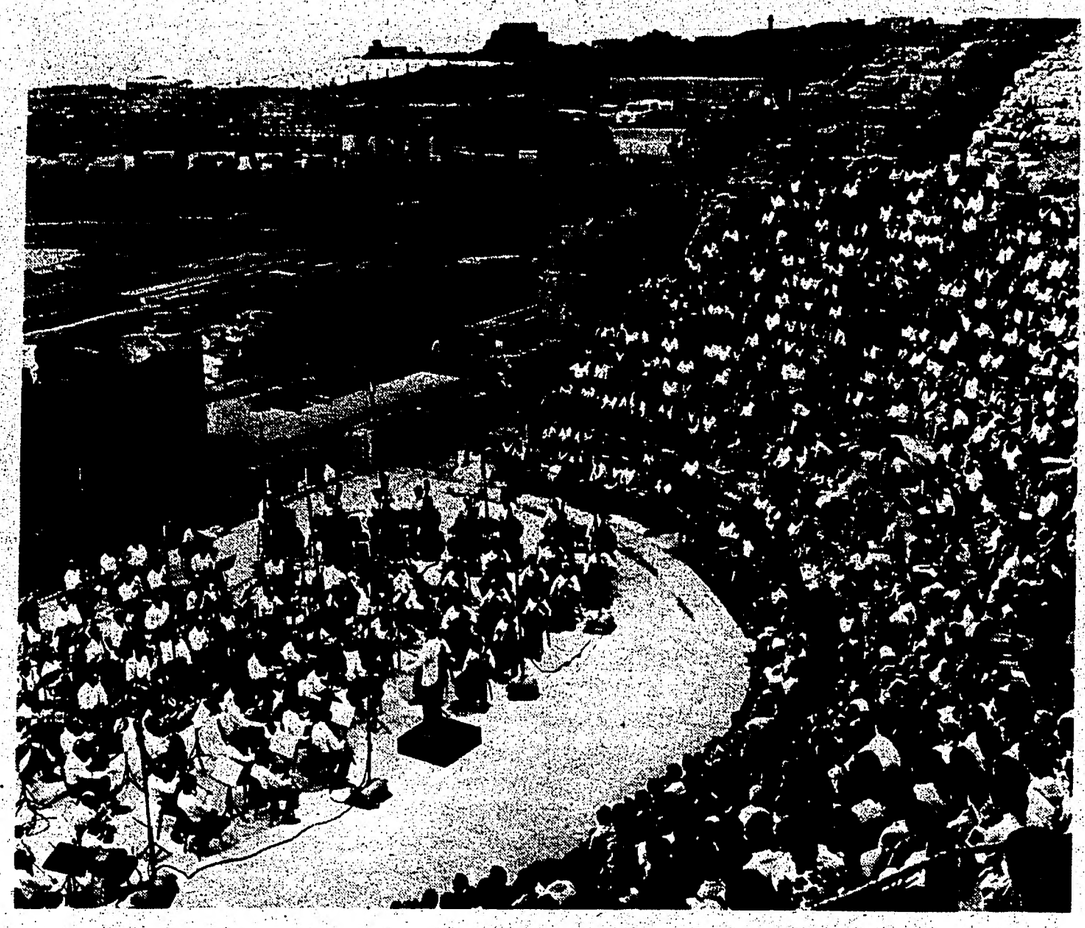
The Zimriya is not a competition, and no prizes are awarded. It is a meeting ground for people who love singing and want to share the joy of singing with others. All choirs consist of amateurs; nevertheless the musicianship frequently reaches professional level.

Musicianship, however, is not the only achievement of the Zimriyot. Living together, singing together and touring the country together result in lasting ties of friendship and brotherhood between people from the four corners of the earth. Choirs that on arrival in Israel could not communicate with each other because of language barriers, found the way the minute they started using that international language par excellence - the language of music.

Sometimes choirs created expressly for the purpose of participating in the Zimriya become permanent institutions, and so it happens that the Hebrew word penetrates a foreign language, as for instance DET DANSKE ZIMRIYAKOR in Denmark.

The 1967 Zimriya will start on July 19 and last till the end of the month. Concerts are scheduled to be held all over the country, thus achieving the double purpose of showing the visiting singers as much of the country as possible and enabling a maximum of Israelis to hear them.

With the second purpose in mind, it has been decided to hold most concerts out of doors and not to charge admission. A unique experience for the visitors will be a sabbath spent in a kibbutz (collective settlement), where no doubt many hours will be devoted to exchanges with the kibbutz choir or choirs. Several of the choristers have already made arrangements to stay on for a period at a kibbutz, getting to know this way of life, working and relaxing with the kibbutz members, and no doubt singing with them.



HEROD'S THEATER — A sunset concert in the reconstructed theater which serves as the center for the Annual Israel Festival. The theater is part of the city of Caesarea, built by King Herod some 20 centuries ago in honor of his Roman rulers. The month long 7th Annual Israel Festival gets underway in late July. Featured at the Festival will be Isaac Stern, Eugene Istomin, Leonard Rose and a variety of other performers. In addition to the sunset performances at Caesarea, others will be held in Jerusalem and at Kibbutzim throughout the country.

FRIENDSHIP BASED ON COMMON VALUES

by the Rt. Hon. Lester B. Pearson the Prime Minister

In Canada we are this year celebrating the hundredth anniversary of Confederation, which makes our country approximately five times as old as modern Israel, and yet so young by comparison with Israel's historic past. We, like you, have faced the challenge of settling and developing the land. In Canada's case, the mastery of our physical invironment has involved the exploration of a great land mass over a period of more than two centuries, the slow spread of settlement from east and west, and the construction of a transcontinental railway and telegraph system more than 6,000 kilometres long. Within this century, air travel and modern communications have made all our vast north accessible and have opened the door to further expansion and growth.

As a result of our own experience, Canadians look with respect upon the notable achievements of Israel in the field of development. Determination and ingenuity in tackling difficult problems have made Israel a model for many countries.

Our two peoples have both felt the strains of forging a common sense of nationhood out of diverse cultural and national groupings, and we have both known the exhilaration which flows from a realization of common purpose and national identity. Within Canada we are striving toward a living dialogue between two great cultures, French and English, with the benefit of infusions from a variety of European - and some non-European - sources. We seek a society in which the values and traditions of each group may not only be preserved by may also reach out to enrich the lives of other cultural groups. In this way, without sacrificing the individuality of diverse backgrounds, we hope to create a truly rich and varied Canadian ethos.

Canadians also like to think of themselves as internationally-minded people. Our participation in and support for the United Nations' efforts to find peaceful solutions to international differences are well known to you. We know you share our conviction that in an era of rising hopes and potentialities, nations owe it to themselves - to the welfare of their people - to solve their differences by moderation and conciliation.

Expo '67, the universal exposition taking place in Montreal this summer, is the largest international manifestation of our Centennial. By means of the many pavilions and spectacles being created in a city of islands and lagoons in the middle of the St. Lawrence River, Canada, is offering to foreign visitors - as well as to her own people - an insight into the Canadian scene: the riches of our past, the variety of our present, and the promise of our future. In return, we ask and hope that the 70 participating nations will reveal their interests, developments, enthusiasms and specialities to us.

In this framework, the Israeli pavilion at Expo provides, for the millions of Canadians and other visitors who pass through it, access to the depth and variety of your civilization. The technology of agriculture and industry, the fine arts and the humanities have all felt your contributions; and we look forward to sharing your sense of this progress, through "Israel Day," when the entire world's fair will be focussing its attention on your land and people.

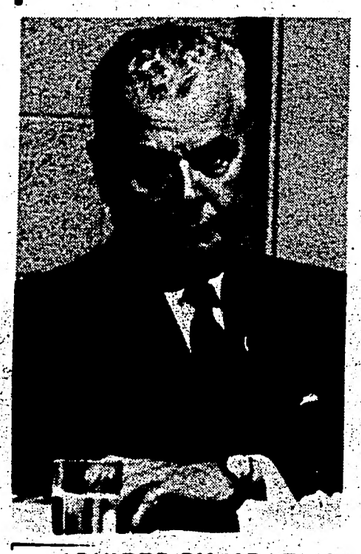
Finally, as we welcome President Shazar, so do we hope that many other citizens of Israel will visit Expo '67. We wish to know Israel better and hope that Israelis will want to know and understand Canada. I am certain that the friendship and common values which bind our two nations will be strengthened by our contacts this year.

FRIENDS IN NEED, FRIENDS IN DEED – From Right to Left: Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson and Secretary Paul Martin who played an historic role in the Mid-East crisis.

CANADA AND ITS PEOPLE

by the Rt. Hon. John G. Diefenbaker

Leader of the Opposition



ADMIRED BY ISRAELIS FOR PROVEN FRIENDSHIP – Opposition leader and former Prime Minister John G. Diefenbaker.

Canada has people of many races to thank for this nation being enabled to celebrate its Centennial. All have played a part in the political, commercial, educational and artistic development of the country over the 100 years since Confederation in 1867.

From the earliest days there were people of racial origins other than French and English who were prominent in the life of the colonies of British North America many years before they were joined together to become Canada. Among them were Jews from both France and Great Britain.

Among the earliest of the European Jewish community was the family of Abraham Gradis of Bordeaux who actively supported the development of New France early in the 18th century. In the 1750s Jews from England settled in Nova Scotia and, following the Treaty of Paris in 1763 others took up permanent residence in various settlements in what is now Quebec.

From this small beginning Jews in Canada have swelled to more than two hundred thousand today. Their contribution in many aspects of national life has been incalculably valuable.

In her first 100 years Canada's association with the Jewish people has been close, fruitful and happy. It will continue to be in the years ahead.

THE RECORD

BY R. L. ROGERS

Canada's Ambassador to Israel

The course of relations between Canada and Israel has been a smooth one. We have a long histroy of satisfactory trading relationships, in which the volume of trade in both directions has grown at a reasonable pace. Indeed, for many years Canada's trade with Israel was greater than its trade with all other countries of the Middle East added together. Of course, on both sides, we should like to see this trade increase further, and we are all working to this end, both private individuals and government representatives.

In the political field there have been few disturbances of the cordial relations which have existed between Israel and Canada. Canada was among the first countries to recognize the State of Israel following its establishment and the ties between us have expanded steadily since that time. The democratic ideals and respect for human individuality which we share have nurtured a mutual understanding. Canada and Israel have found useful fields of cooperation in many international projects of interest to both at the United Nations. And, of course, the people of both countries want a world order which will be free of wars and the threat of wars.

INVENTION

A new invention that is expected to have wide application - a highly simplified over-running (free-wheeling) clutch - was demonstrated at the first National Convention of Mechanical Engineers held under the auspices of the Technion and the Architects and Engineers Association.

The inventor, Professor Boaz Popper, a Technion lecturer and an engineer with the Ministry of Defense, demonstrated that his clutch consists of only four parts compared with the conventional twenty parts. Because its operation entails less friction and stresses, it can be manufactured from cheaper metals.

BUILDS SYNAGOGUE IN ISRAEL

The dedication of the Isaac-Esther Cadesky Synagogue, a Histadrut project in Or Yehuda, Israel, will take place on Wednesday, August 16th, with Dr. David Monson, Rabbi of Beth Sholom, officiating.

The Isaac-Esther Cadesky Synagogue will serve 700 families -- refugees from Roumania and Iraq. This synagogue will be most unique, because it will be the first time that Sephardim, Jews of Oriental background, and Ashkenazim, Jews of European backgroumd, wil worship together in one edifice. The ritual and liturgy of the congregation will be conducted in such a manner as to accommodate both Sephardim and Ashkenazim.

Mr. Louis Cadesky, a Toronto philanthropist, contributed the funds to make possible the building of this synagogue, which is dedicated to the memory of his late parents, Isaac and Esther Cadesky of Owen Sound.

This late Isaac and Esther Cadesky were among the early Jewish settlers in Northern Ontario and were revered by Jew and Christian alike. They were fully observant of Judaism and, although their family was a large one, their home was a center of hospitality for the traveller, the weary and the wayfarer. They lived to a ripe old age. The Isaac-Esther Cadesky Synagogue, built under the auspices of the Histadrut in Israel, will be affiliated with the Religious Department of the Histadrut.

The delegation attending the opening ceremonies, headed by Mr. Louis Cadesky, will include Rabbi David Monson; Mr. Frank Cadesky, First Vice-President of Beth Sholom Synagogue, as well as representatives of Histadrut and members of the Beth Sholom.

ISRAEL EXPORTS - WORLD-WIDE PROMOTION

Israeli fashions, crafts and food will be displayed and sold in nearly 10,000 stores throughout Europe, the U.S. and in Australia this year. This wide-scale exposure will be within the framework of a series of "Israel Weeks" arranged by store owners in conjunction with the Israel Company for Fairs and Exhibitions.

The first "Israel Week" was held at the Printemps store in Paris in 1959, and the idea has snowballed since then. The first such event in the U.S. was at the Chicago department store Carson, Pirie, Scott in 1964. Many of the department stores and individual shops sponsoring Israel Weeks this year are repeating successes of earlier years, some for the third time. Israel Weeks around the world during 1966 brought in nearly $3 million in orders to Israel.

While some of the stores, such as Selfridges in London, Organize their Israel Week in only one shop, others rotate the display in hundreds, or even thousands of stores - Otra of Finland, for example, will display and sell Israeli products in 7,000 shops throughout the country. The Albert Heijn food chain in Holland will cover 400 stores, while New York's Macy's is arranging "Weeks" in 11 stores in New York, eight in San Francisco and 15 in the associated shops of the May Company in Los Angeles. Not to be outdone, Gimbels will sell in nine stores. Citrus and fruit will be sold in over 1,000 stores of the Irma chain throughout Denmark. In Goteborg, Sweden, "Israel Week" was a citywide event during January.

HOSTS TO PRESIDENT SHAZAR. - During the visit of Israel's President Zalman Shazar in Canada, two Sabbath services have been arranged by the Mizrachi-Hapoel Hamizrachi of Montreal and Toronto. Last week an impressive minyan, with the President participating, was held in a Montreal hotel.

This weekend in Toronto, the special minyan honoring the President, a devout Jew and Lubavitch Hasid, has been organized by Toronto's Mizrachi-Hapoel Hamizrachi in which, according to RCMP instruction, a limited number of leading personalities of the city's Jewish community will participate.

Nachman Sokol (above), president of Mizrachi-Hapoel Hamizrachi of Toronto, is in charge of religious arrangements on behalf of the Canadian hosts.
